

Council Wants Rate Control

KINGSTON — The Kingston Common Council Tuesday night moved two steps closer to taking control of water rates away from the Kingston Water Board.

Aldermen approved the first two of three required readings of a proposed amendment to the city charter that would give the mayor and council final rate approval. The 9-3 vote found Aldermen Clifford G. Sinsabaugh, D-10th Ward, Daniel F. Smith, D-11th Ward, and Minority Leader Titus B. Sims, R-13th Ward, opposed.

J. Joseph Markle, D-Third Ward, asked Corporation Counsel Aaron Klein if the proposed change would take autonomy away from the water board. Klein said the change would only apply to water rate approval.

A 20 per cent increase in water rates announced early in May drew fire from several aldermen who said the water board had assured them that no increase was contemplated. Donald E. Quick, D-Sixth Ward, accused the water board of "dirty pool" and Clarence C. Raichle, R-First Ward, pointed out the apparent inconsistency of a rate increase just five months after the water board had trimmed its operating budget.

Sims said the public had voted down a charter revision in November that would have given water rate approval to the mayor and council. "I don't believe I can reverse myself once the people have spoken," he said.

The council unanimously approved sale by the Urban Renewal Agency of the historic Hoffman House to Padriac Bradley and Virginia Barogin, who plan to develop it into a restaurant. At a public hearing, Bradley said no exterior changes would be made. Richard Mathews of Colonial Carpet Co. said it would be a welcome addition to the tax rolls and Albert Gruner, a dentist with offices at 120 North Front Street, echoed his sentiments.

Sale price for the house and quarter acre lot at 96 North Front Street is $30,000.

The council approved 9-3 a resolution to hire architect George Hutton to draw up plans for a new uptown fire station. Sinsabaugh said the city is contemplating a site on Converse Street and identified it as the same property being sought by the Children's Library. Voting against the measure were Philip A. Decicco, D-Ninth Ward, Markle, and Quick, who said he thought Hutton was getting too much of the city's business and suggested the city should "spread the action around."

Sinsabaugh said the Community Development Committee had gotten quotes from four firms and that Hutton's bid was lowest by a considerable margin. The council unanimously approved a new station wagon for the fire chief and will advertise for bids. The present vehicle has 120,000 miles on it, it was told.

Requests by various employees for expenses to attend conferences got a mixed reception. The aldermen approved 11-1 a June 8 trip to Grossinger's for Building Inspector George Radcliffe after learning that he has not yet resigned from his post.

They were told that he has submitted a letter of resignation but that it will not be effective until a successor is named. Ernest L. Smith, sealer of weights and measures, won 10-2 approval for a trip to Tamarack Lodge to meet with similar officials from around the state, but Dr. Marc Eisenbert of the City Laboratory squeaked through 7-6 on his request for expenses for a four-day conference in Syracuse. The tie-breaking vote was cast by Peter Mancuso, D-12th Ward, serving as chairman while Alderman-at-Large T. Robert Gallo filled in as acting mayor for the absent Francis R. Koenig.

The council unanimously approved the third reading of a proposed local law that would require all future city employees to be residents of the city. The measure will be the subject of a public hearing at a future date and becomes law with Koenig's approval.

The council approved sale of a parcel of land at Hurley Avenue and Washington Avenue to the Rondout National Bank for $32,000 and amended Section 6-A of the Uptown Urban Renewal Plan to add banks to the approved list of businesses in the area.

Public hearings will be held before the July 6 council meeting to consider the application of Saddle Aduchefsky Hirsch and Max Aduchefsky to buy for $3,000 Urban Renewal Parcel 7-A on North Front Street and to rescind a previously approved sale of adjacent parcel 7 to Richard and Rita Roth. Alderman James F. Howard, D-Seventh Ward, chairman of the Railroad and Bus Committee, reported that the city's new bus system between April 26 and May 25 hauled 7,496 passengers and took in $1,874.

Moon Day Comes to Violent End

NEW YORK — "It's been just murder here," a Yankee Stadium security guard outside the first aid room said Tuesday night as Rev. Sun Myung Moon's much-heralded rally drew to a close.

Police reported seven arrests at the "God Bless America Festival" kickoff for various violent acts. Emotions ran high outside the stadium where numerous religious sects protested and inside the stands where bands of youths roamed seeking physical confrontation.

The Unification Church planned this rally for many moons. The day began with a press junket through the group's seminary in Barrytown and Belvedere Estates in Tarrytown, headquarters for "VIPs," as one follower put it.

Questions on the tour and questions in the minds of demonstrators seemed to center on the growing evidence linking the Unification Church to repressive political right-wing groups in Korea and fears expressed by some student groups that the "Moonies" were being given free rein to strike in goon squads similar to the brown shirts of Hitler's regime.

An estimated 35,000 were in the stadium, with about half reportedly leaving midway through the Rev. Moon's 25-minute speech.

Anticipation among church followers of a spectacular turnout was high during the day. They kept glancing skyward as each thundercloud moved into view.

"I can't believe it's finally June 1," exclaimed one woman in her mid-20s on the ride toward Tarrytown, clapping her hands. "We've worked so hard for this," she explained.

Michael Mikler, editor of the seminary newspaper at Barrytown, led the tour through the old St. Joseph's Seminary buildings, joking, "Some media say we're the brainwashing capital of America. We've had lots of problems with parents."

The rally that night was seen by the Moonies as the next step in a plan that followed Moon's Madison Square Garden appearance in November, 1974 and precedes a planned Washington Monument appearance in the nation's capital this September.

Said Mikler of a parents' conference sponsored by the church at its newly purchased New York Hilton this week, "I ran into Ted Patrick (famed Moonie 'de-programmer') at the Hilton this week.

All forces are meeting head to head. There will be fundamentalist Christians, Marxist-Leninists, parents, Hare Krishna, a real cross section."

He was right on target with that projection, as an estimated 20 different sects paraded outside the stadium that night in protest.

In the kitchen at Barrytown a young girl was preparing a mammoth replica of Yankee Stadium — in cake, complete with the grey icing sidewalk outside, for a celebration to take place at Belvedere the next day.

At Belvedere, formerly owned by the Brownmans, Seagram's whiskey magnates, a large poster hung over a stage on the neatly manicured lawn proclaiming "One World Under God."

One visitor marvelled at how a construction project on the grounds was all being done by hand instead of using machinery. A huge retaining wall along the New York City aqueduct was being replaced using quarter-inch manila rope and handpower instead of earth movers. Inside the ornate central mansion, cheap cardboard replicas of famous paintings seemed out of place in the plush surroundings.

The violence at Yankee Stadium consisted of several hundred youths running wildly about, said one police officer, accosting Moon followers and smashing the hell out of them.

Some students claimed the attacks were in retaliation for a Moonie raid recently that broke up a demonstration against outcasts in the city university system. One Moonie suffered a broken arm and a policeman was stabbed with a homemade weapon Tuesday night.

Even without the violence, the rally was seen by UPI as "something less than a public relations triumph" because of the poor attendance.

Rev. Moon reportedly enjoys getting publicity, whether favorable or not, according to Mike Mikler. "I think adverse publicity helps us," he commented, quoting Moon as having said, "Persecution is the fertilizer that makes us grow quicker."

Does he think that fascism is necessary to stop the advance of Communism? Anti-Communism is a key tenet of the Unification Church. He hesitated a few seconds and answered, "I wouldn't really say we're fascist."

Spada Now Waits for Appeal

KINGSTON — The man who stands to lose the most from Supreme Court Justice John H. Pennock's decision to set aside Ulster County's Local Law No. 1 of 1976 is County Legislator Frank R. Spada, R-Dist. 1.

The law, taking the power of filling legislative vacancies from the governor and giving it to the Legislature itself, resulted in Spada's appointment last February to the post being vacated by the resignation of Robert H. Kuhlmann, Republican from the same district. Pennock's decision has now paved the way for the attorney general to bring an action to remove Spada from office.

Spada said, "It's an awful let-down. I feel bad about it." He feels sure, he said, that the Republican majority in the Legislature will appeal the decision. "In the meantime, what do I do?" he asked. "It's just like giving somebody a knock in the head and then saying, 'There, try to get over that!'"

Waiting for the decision for several months, he said it had been "like being in limbo." Still, he's glad a decision was made, one way or another.

"Everybody now knows just where we stand," he said, "and we can proceed from there." A firm believer in local autonomy and home rule, he'll continue attending meetings. "I tried to do a good job," he said, "and I'd still like to continue."

With a judgment also expected as to whether monies received by Spada will have to be repaid to the county, the Kerhonkson legislator said, "I haven't gotten a penny since I've been in office and I've received no other remuneration whatsoever."

Robert H. Kuhlmann, whose seat Spada took when the governor ruled he could not work for the state's Woodburne Correctional Facility and serve as a legislator, had little comment on Pennock's decision. "I resigned of my own free will,"

he said, "and I did not vote on Local Law 1 since I was personally involved."

"Everyone rather thought it would go this way several months ago," he said.

Of a judgment pending on possible repayment of his own salary, he said, "That won't make or break me since it only involved one month's pay."

Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago, R-Dist. 8, stood firmly behind the reasons county lawmakers had used originally in opting for home rule. "I've always been of the opinion the County Legislature should be able to make appointments regardless of who the governor is at any given time," he said.

"A number of cases have set precedents in the matter since Rockefeller's terms of office," he said. (The Pennock decision said the Legislature had "erroneously relied" on the Nydick case, which involved a chartered county and was not applicable to Ulster, which has not elected adopt a charter form of government.)

Even so, Savago said, "I see no reason why the County Legislature should not have the same right to appoint, if a village board, a town board and a board of education has that right."

County Attorney Abram F. Molyneux confirmed Spada's belief that the decision would be appealed. "As soon as the order is served on us," he said, "we will appeal." Molyneux added, "We would appeal, of course — as a matter of course — in something of this nature."

Molyneux said Tuesday he had not yet had an opportunity to read the decision. But he said the filing of an appeal will serve to "stay" anything connected with the matter.

For Spada, that will mean "being in limbo" all over again.

Parents Are Denied a Vote on MACOS

WALKKILL — Voters of the Walkkill Central School District won't get a chance to express their opinions on the controversial MACOS social studies program after all.

The Walkkill Board of Education at a special meeting Tuesday night voted to deny a petition from Concerned Parents of Walkkill to put the program up for an advisory referendum in today's school district election. The vote was 5-2 with Joseph Egan, Beatrice Elliott, Lois Morris, Richard Barclay and Robert Wynkoop in favor and Terry Terwilliger and William Schwarz opposed.

Terwilliger said he felt the public has the right to petition for a referendum even if it is only advisory. He noted that a driver education petition had been approved for referendum today even though the results would only be advisory, and said he felt the MACOS proposition should be included too.

Mrs. Sharon Styles, chairman of OPOW, said today that she was unable to understand the board's action. "They are just being arbitrary," she said. "Their minds are already made up. They listened to us, but that was all."

"We may just have to wait for the school board elections and try to vote down the members who opposed the petition," she said today.

MACOS (Man: A Course of Study) will be taught to sixth graders in the Walkkill Middle School beginning in September on a voluntary basis. Child dren whose parents object will be taught the regular sixth grade social studies curriculum.

The highly controversial program was developed by Peter B. Dow of the Education Development Center in Cambridge, Mass. and other educators. It uses the inquiry method instead of memorization emphasis to teach "what it means to be a human animal rather than some other kind of animal."

"Begun 10 years ago, it was funded with $4.8 million in federal funds, with an additional $3 million to market the program to schools.

The program uses materials about the Netsilik Eskimos to develop its theme. Opponents say scenes involving skinning and eating of arctic animals had to be staged because the Netsiliks now live in huts and drive snowmobiles, calling the scenes "an extinct form of survival culture."

Two of the films were shown to Walkill residents at a public meeting in May. The speaker, an administrative assistant to Congressman John Conlan of Arizona, said it was objectionable to show such films to impressionable 10- and 11-year-olds as a captive audience.

Mrs. Estelle Caswell, chairman of the social studies department of the Walkill Middle School, said social studies teachers favor the program because it "removes the stigma of the bottom group" and emphasizes skills in being a common denominator for youngsters from three different elementary schools.

Opponents fear stressing similarities between the habits and social structures of animals leads to emphasizing Darwin's theory of evolution, leaving out any Biblical explanation of the creation of man.

Lasher, Roosa Move Up at Freeman

Lasher

KINGSTON — Sherwood F. Lasher, a 14-year employee of The Daily Freeman, has been promoted to the post of advertising director, effective immediately, according to Richard L. Treat, publisher. Also effective immediately is the promotion of William A. Roosa to Lasher's former position of retail advertising manager, said Treat.

In his new capacity, Lasher will be responsible for the general supervision of all advertising, including classified, national and display advertising, and supervision of the Freeman's dispatch department.

Robert Sathloff, who has been filling the positions advertising director and assistant general manager, will now concentrate on his duties as assistant general manager.

Lasher brings to his new position an extensive background in retail advertising. Coming to the paper as a display advertising solicitor, he was promoted four years ago to retail advertising manager.

The newly appointed advertising director resides at 44 Henry Street and was educated in the Kingston school system. He has held several important church posts locally and has been active for many years in Rip Van Winkle Council, Boy Scouts of America.

In his new position as retail advertising manager, Roosa will coordinate the advertising of both the Daily and Sunday Freeman editions.

He will also directly supervise the retail advertising of the newspaper, and be in overall charge of display advertising sales personnel.

Roosa has been an employee of The Freeman for nine years, serving in the position of display advertising salesman. A native of Kingston, he attended Kingston High School, Ulster County Community College and New Jersey's Ryder College.

He now resides at 5 Onteora Court, Shokan.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Thousands of Syrian troops took control of northern and eastern Lebanon today, driving to within 30 miles of Beirut. Leftists and Palestinians feared it was the prelude to an attack on the capital.

The Syrians, saying they had come "to restore law and order," swept through the eastern Bekaa Valley Tuesday, breaking a leftwing siege of the Christian city of Zahle and overrunning leftist and Palestinian positions.

Woman Killed in Crash Police Beat

HYDE PARK—A Rhinebeck woman was killed in a head-on collision in Hyde Park. The Dutchess County Sheriff's Department reports that Maria Haynor, 70, of Old Post Road was traveling south on Route 9 at 4:14 p.m. during a heavy rain when her car veered into the south-bound lane and was in collision with a van driven by John Kotchie III, 19, of Meadow Drive, Wappinger's Falls. Mrs. Haynor was pronounced dead on arrival at St. Francis Hospital at 5:45 P.M. Kotchie was treated for lacerations of the face, right knee and heel at Vassar Brother's Hospital and released.

One Arrested

A high-speed chase in Kingston night resulted in the arrest of John A. Heitzman, 18, 93 Hoffman Street for driving while intoxicated, possession of a controlled substance in the seventh degree and a host of traffic violations at 2:30 a.m. Deputy Sheriff Richard Dugan observed Heitzman driving erratically at a high speed on Pearl Street and gave chase. When the suspect failed to stop, assistance was requested from the Kingston Police Department. Heitzman went through several red lights before he apparently lost control of his car, knocked over a parking meter and a traffic sign and came to rest on the sidewalk by the Academy Green Park. Heitzman was brought before Esopus Justice Robert Jordan and remanded to the Ulster County jail in lieu of $2,500 bail. He is scheduled to appear in Kingston City Court on June 3.

Felony Charge

Gerald G. Rigoulot, 39, of Highland also appeared before Justice Jordan last night, charged with driving while intoxicated and since it is his second offense it constitutes a felony. Deputy Sheriff Michael Craft observed Rigoulot driving erratically on Route 213 in Rifton at 12:45 A.M. He went off the right shoulder of the road, knocking over garbage cans and a mailbox, and ran into a tree. Rigoulot was also remanded to the Ulster County jail in lieu of $5,000 bail.

Support For Budgets In Steady Decline

ALBANY (UPI) — Taxpayer support for school district budgets appears to be steadily declining, according to figures released by the state Education Department.

The department said Tuesday that voters rejected nearly one-third of the school district budgets which came before them last month.

That was compared to rejection votes on one-fourth of the proposed budgets in 1975 and one-fifth in 1974, the department said.

This year voters approved 120 of 174 budgets, or 69 per cent, and turned down 54. One year earlier, voters approved 138 of 184, or 75 per cent, of the school budgets. In May 1974, 143 of 181, or 79 per cent, of the budgets were approved.

The department said the Long Island area suffered the heaviest rejection level, with 25 "no" votes. Most school budget elections are held in June.

When a school budget is rejected at the polls, a special contingency budget designed to continue basic services goes into effect.

2 Failure of Nuke Curb: 'Just One Inning'

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Assemblyman Daniel Haley says "it's just one inning" in reference to the setback given his bill that would have set stringent regulations on the construction of nuclear power plants.

The Assembly Committee on Corporations, Authorities and Commissions Tuesday rejected the Waddington Democrat's measure which critics have claimed would set such tough rules that it would make it virtually impossible to build any nuclear plants in the state.

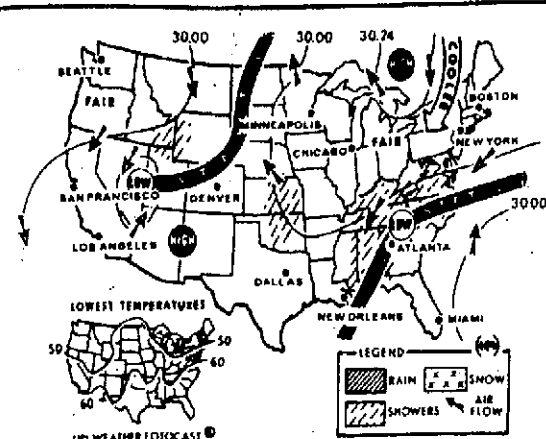

In view of the probability that the legislature will be adjourning in less than three weeks, the committee rejection would appear to rule out any further action this year, but Haley said he had not given up.

Haley contended that instead of continuing to spend money on developing generating plants that depend on either fossil or nuclear power, the utilities should consider solar and wind generation. He charged that "even if nuclear plants were 100 per cent safe, it's wrong to keep on spending huge amounts of money to build plants that use a fuel which will be in short supply in the near future."

Haley said the huge cost pushes up the cost of electricity and he contended that is one of the major reasons that in-

Upstate Black Woman Heads State Demos

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — A 65-year-old great grandmother who lives with her mother and says she is "married to politics" has become the first black to head the state Democratic party organization.

Mrs. Jessica (Judy) Johnson, a cabinet level officer in the administration of Buffalo Mayor Stanley Makowski and a protege of former state chairman Joseph Crangle, assumed state Democratic chairman Patrick Cunningham's duties Tuesday when he voluntarily took a leave of absence from his office.

Cunningham temporarily left the state party chairmanship pending the outcome of bribery and related charges placed against him by Special State Prosecutor Maurice H. Nadjari.

Being the first black or the first woman to hold an office is nothing new to Mrs. Johnson. She has been both several times since she became active in Democratic party politics in 1945.

Mrs. Johnson had been elected as the party's first vice chairperson in a move that began as something of a fluke. She was originally slated to be assistant treasurer of the state organization, but Cunningham accidentally nominated her for one of the five vice-chairperson slots up for election at the state committee's April 23 meeting.

Once she had been elected a vice-chairperson, however, former state chairman Joseph Crangle and Assemblyman Arthur O. Eve capitalized on a split between party regulars and reformers and nominated her as first vice-chairperson.

The state committee then elected her to the post, placing her on the Democratic national committee. Mrs. Johnson was the first black ever elected to the party's number two position.

The confidential aide to Buffalo Mayor Stanley Makowski first became active in politics 31 years ago when she served as assistant campaign manager for her church's pastor in an unsuccessful campaign for a city Common Council post.

After that campaign it was 12 years until she re-entered the political arena in 1957. Again it was to assist a friend in a council race. This time the friend, Mrs. Cora P. Mahoney, won and appointed Mrs. Johnson as her secretary.

Mrs. Johnson also became a Democratic party committeeman during the election, assuming her first party position.

When Mrs. Mahoney — the council's first woman member — died, her successor retained Mrs. Johnson as his secretary.

In 1963, Mrs. Johnson took her first statewide party post when she was elected assistant secretary of the Democratic State Committee.

She continued her work as a Common Council member's secretary until 1966, when Mrs. Johnson was appointed to a city office of her own. Then-Mayor Frank Sedita named her as the city's first woman license director.

Nine months later she was appointed the mayor's confidential aide — becoming the first woman and the first black member of a Buffalo mayor's inner cabinet.

Makowski retained her in the post, which now carries an annual $17,300 salary, when he took office in 1973.

Mrs. Johnson, who was divorced five years ago, has two sons, eight grandchildren and two great grandchildren. She lives with her mother in Buffalo.

Fate of Lulus on the Line Today

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Legislators were watching three separate calendars today — the legislative calendar which lists bills to be acted upon; the regular calendar which tells them they've been in session five months, and the court calendar, where the fate of their "lulus" is resting.

The controversial issue over the payments of $882,500 in self-voted extra allowances for the legislators is listed for argument late today before the Court of Appeals, the state's highest tribunal.

Two lower courts have already ruled that the additional allowances were illegal because they violated the ban against legislators increasing payments to themselves within their own term of office.

The challenges were brought by the state Civil Service Employees Association and the New York Public Interest Research Group, which also asked that the legislators repay the money they voted themselves last year. The Appellate Division rejected that request.

The payments, commonly known as lulus in reference to a former system of lump sum payments to legislators "in lieu of expenses," range from $21,000 for the Senate majority leader and Assembly speaker, to $1,000 extra for minority party members on sub-committees.

They were given last year to all 60 senators and 103 of the 150 assemblymen. All legislators receive a base salary of $23,500 a year and up to $40 a day in expenses.

If the high court upholds the lower courts, it is not known what action the legislature would take to obtain the additional funds this year but they could vote additional money for legislative leadership posts beginning next year, when a newly elected legislature will take over.

Meanwhile, Tuesday was mostly a mark time day as the lawmakers returned from a four-day Memorial Day weekend and began grinding towards an anticipated adjournment in about three weeks. Many Capitol observers believe the adjournment drive this year was stalled to a degree by the prospective court action on lulus.

18th Assembly Voting
The Assembly passed a bill which would bar the use of chemical PCBs in the state after Oct. 1, 1977.

The measure, sponsored by Assemblyman G. Oliver Koppell, D-Bronx, was approved 127-7 and sent to the Senate, where it stood a good chance of passage.

"The health hazard posed by PCBs demands their elimination," Koppell said. PCBs are used in the manufacture of electrical components.

Earlier this year, the state Department of Environmental Conservation ordered a ban on most commercial fishing in the Hudson River because of high levels of PCBs, or polychlorinated biphenyls.

En Con is currently engaged in hearings in an attempt to force the General Electric Co. to cease PCB discharges from plants at Fort Edward and Hudson Falls and clean up PCB-laden sediments in the river.

Koppell's bill would allow the En Con commissioner to grant exemptions to the PCB ban for "trace amounts present beyond the control of the manufacturer due to the presence of PCBs in process water."

He said the exemptions would allow paper mills to continue using Hudson water. The commissioner could also allow the use of PCBs in closed systems.

Koppell called the measure "a reasonable formula to alleviate the problems of PCB contamination without crippling certain industries which rely on this chemical."

In the Senate, a bill was approved which would create a statewide panel to boost the tourist industry.

The measure, expected to gain approval in the Assembly, would set up an Interdepartmental Tourist Advisory Council, chaired by the commerce commissioner.

It would be charged with developing plans to promote tourism and would be made up of the heads of a wide spectrum of state agencies.

How Senate Voted

The Senate also approved a bill which would require the state Thruway Authority to provide tourist information at service areas. Both measures were sponsored by Sen. Frederick Warder, R-Geneva.

Another bill passed by the Senate would allow widowers to collect old age and survivors insurance benefits.

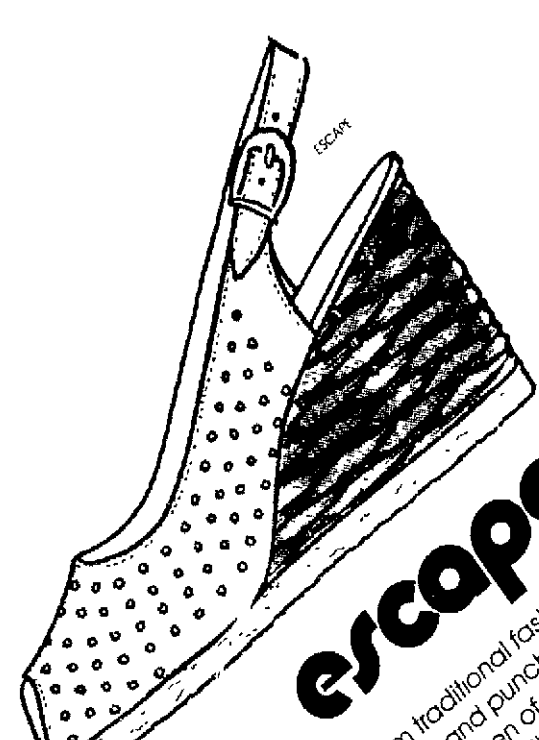

The sponsor, Sen. Dale Volker, R-Depew, said the bill "removes an element of sex discrimination from the law by simply extending the insurance coverage to the husbands of female members of the state's pension system and the policemen's and firemen's retirement system."

The measure, requested by the state Department of Audit and Control, was expected to pass the Assembly.

The Senate gave final passage to a bill which would delay for three months the implementation of regulations governing hearing aid dealers.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Joseph Pisani, R-New Rochelle, would push back the effective date of the regulations from June 1 to Sept. 1 to allow more time for the secretary of state's office to set up enforcement machinery.

Dogs in Garbage Trouble Rhinebeck

RHINEBECK—Garbage collection days have become a nuisance for residents of Rhinebeck Village because of dogs who tip over trash cans and scatter trash on lawns and streets. While the town of Rhinebeck has a leash law, the more densely populated village has only a nuisance ordinance which, according to Dog Warden Joy Richmond, is unenforceable.

To file a complaint under the existing ordinance, a citizen must first find out the owner of the dog. This is usually impractical since the dog must be caught.

Howard Flick, 70 Montgomery St., says he has been picking up after dogs for 13 and a half years and is sick of it. He wants to see the village enact a leash law similar to the town's. His neighbors, most of whom wished not to be named, agree the dogs are a nuisance, but disagree about the idea of a leash law. Mrs. Richmond, who is also dog warden for the town of Red Hook, says the leash law there has succeeded in solving the problem of scattered garbage. It has also reduced the number of dogs killed by automobiles. Identified by residents as heading the list of guilty parties are a medium-sized black dog with a talent for removing trash can lids with a deft motion of mouth and paw, a large Golden Retriever, a Dalmatian, a bloodhound, and a German shepherd with a grudge against cats.

State Wants All To Get Flu Shot

ALBANY (UPI)—On July 1, the State Health Department will begin a campaign intended in five months to immunize all New York State residents against the so-called swine flu.

The goal will be to immunize the entire population by Nov. 30 — before the start of the regular flu season.

The first target for immunization will be the 2.5 million persons in the "high risk" group, including those over 65 and others with chronic heart and pulmonary diseases.

The program is part of a $135 million national campaign to protect the population against a possible epidemic of a swine flu strain which caused a recent outbreak at a New Jersey army post. The strain strongly resembled that which killed 20 million persons in 1918, including 550,000 Americans.

State Health Commissioner Robert Whalen, announced Tuesday that his department would work in conjunction with local health agencies on a three-phase campaign "to make the vaccine as widely available as possible and to educate New Yorkers as to the need for protection against this particular strain of flu."

The other two phases of the program will focus on immunizing persons with access to regular medical services, such as those offered through colleges, industry and government facilities, and other members of the general population.

"We are calling upon public and private health agencies, the media and other official and voluntary organizations for cooperation in this unprecedented effort," Whalen said.

A statewide "immunization action committee" representing 40 public, voluntary, business, labor health and medical organizations will play a major role in implementing the program, Whalen said.

The vaccine will be made available to counties for industries and agencies having medical staffs capable of immunizing their own employees and constituents and will also be distributed to nursing homes, hospitals and other long-term care institutions for immunization of their patients and staff.

Physicians in private practice are also being asked to immunize persons in their care considered "high risk" and to volunteer their services as medical advisors for local immunization programs.

Vaccines will also be supplied free of charge to physicians for any other persons they wish to immunize.

CUNY Free Ride Ends

NEW YORK (UPI)—New York City's 129-year tradition of free higher education comes to an end next September in a move aimed at reopening the recently closed 270,000 student City University of New York in time for final examinations.

The Board of Higher Education voted 7-1 Tuesday night to charge an annual $750 tuition for freshmen and sophomores in the four-year colleges of the CUNY system and $900 for juniors and seniors.

The decision to impose the tuition charges, which are comparable to those of the State University system, came in the hopes the state legislature can now be persuaded to allocate $24 million to allow CUNY to finish the present school year.

Legislative sources said that in view of prospective voter resentment in an election year, it was unlikely that an aid bill could be passed until a decision was made to charge City University students tuition.

In announcing the BHE action, Chairman Harold Jacobs said that "based on conversations with state officials," he believed the decision to impose tuition means the City University system "probably would get funding through June," enabling it to reopen.

CUNY closed last Friday when it ran out of funds and defaulted on the faculty payroll, forcing the postponement of final exams and delaying the graduation of 20,000 seniors.

Reagan, Ford, Carter, Brown, Church Taste Victory

Everyone Won a Little Except Mo

UPI

Ronald Reagan scored two more primary victories in Montana and South Dakota Tuesday but lost to President Ford by a landslide in Rhode Island. Democratic front-runner Jimmy Carter won in South Dakota but lost the other two states to liberal challengers.

Everyone except Morris Udall won a little bit in the three small primaries that served as a warmup for next week's "super Tuesday" when California, Ohio and New Jersey elect one-third of the delegates needed to win the nomination in both parties.

Ford and Reagan broke about even. The President won easily in Rhode Island and picked up all 19 delegates there, split the South Dakota delegates 9-11 with Reagan and lost heavily in Montana where no delegates were elected.

The outcome on the Republican side made it more likely that Ford and Reagan some of the uncommitted delegates are said to favor the former Georgia governor.

Church Victory Sign (UPI)

In Montana, Frank Church, the senator from neighboring Idaho, won easily. He was the only Democrat to campaign in the state. Carter won South Dakota by a large margin, despite an intensive five-day campaign by Morris Udall who had predicted he would win his first primary there.

It marked the third straight week that a combination of Brown and Church stopped Carter in primary contests. The damage to Carter's front-running campaign was mostly psychological as he continued to pile up delegates toward the magic mark of 1,505 needed to win the nomination.

The three primaries had little effect on the delegate battle. Ford led Reagan by a count of 822 to 651. Among the Democrats, Carter still held a big lead on the Democratic side, adding 20 delegates for a total of 905. Udall was a distant second with 308.

"The President, I believe, did a little better than expected," said Ford's campaign chairman Rogers Morton. He said the Ford campaign had not expected to win nine delegates in South Dakota.

Here's how the three primaries came out:

Rhode Island — Ford got two-thirds of the vote and all 19 delegates, overwhelming

Reagan by a vote of 9,341 to 4,419. In a close three-way race, the uncommitted states received 31 per cent or 18,902 votes, to 30 per cent or 18,141 for Carter and 28 per cent or 16,698 for Church.

South Dakota — Reagan beat Ford by a vote of 42,159 to 36,329, and the two GOP contenders split the 20 delegates. On the Democratic side, Carter got 41 per cent of the vote, or 24,571 to 20,055, to 34 per cent for Udall.

Montana — Reagan won easily by a vote of 45,069 to 25,114. Church also had no trouble, beating Carter 50,331 to 20,813 with 85 per cent of the vote counted.

Brown said the showing of the uncommitted delegates in Rhode Island means that Carter has yet to prove himself as the front-runner.

"To me it's an amazing victory trying to get the people of Rhode Island to vote uncommitted," he said in New York. "... I think it demonstrates that Jimmy Carter has yet to prove himself as the front-runner."

Church said his strong third-place showing in Rhode Island was "very encouraging." He also hinted in an interview in Cleveland that Udall should drop out of the race.

Ron's Smiles Tell It would end the primary season about even, with about 100 uncommitted delegates holding the balance of power before the Republican convention in Kansas City in August.

Rhode Island Democrats followed the call of Gov. Edmund G. Brown of California, who had urged them to pull the uncommitted lever as a sign of support for him. The uncommitted slate narrowly edged Carter — and the delegate outcome was unclear since Vegas Rain and 'The Will'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A handwriting analyst declares the purported "Mormon will" of billionaire Howard Hughes authentic — partly because rainy days are rare in the desert.

An attorney for Noah Dietrich, named executor in the controversial document, called for assembly of "a panel of experts from all over the world" to weigh its authenticity.

The lawyer, Harold Rhoden, said Tuesday he had been assured by telephone by Michael Kradz, a Virginia handwriting analyst who has worked for several police agencies and the FBI, that the document is genuine.

Kradz said a three-week investigation left him with "no doubt" that Howard Hughes scrawled the three-page document secretly left on a desk in Mormon Church headquarters in Salt Lake City after his death, according to Rhoden.

Not only is the handwriting identical to two known examples of Hughes' writing, showing the "same inconsistencies," Kradz said, but a slight running of the ink showed the paper was moistened.

Records show that on March 19, 1968 — the date on the will — one hundredth of an inch of rain fell on Las Vegas, Nev., where Hughes was living at the time, Kradz said.

Kradz was the third analyst to say the will appeared genuine. Two others have declared it a well-executed forgery.

If accepted by the courts, the will would distribute Hughes' $2.5 billion fortune, including a share of more than $100 million to Melvin Dummer, a Utah gasoline station operator who says he once gave a ride and a quarter to a shabby old man who said he was Howard Hughes.

Rhoden said he was still waiting for Kradz's written report to arrive by mail before acting on his findings, but that his conclusion probably would influence Dietrich to push his claim.

"Now we should gather a panel of experts from all over the world to prepare to testify" on the document's authenticity, he said.

Meanwhile, another will — the 26th to date — appeared at the Clark County Courthouse in Las Vegas, mailed by the Seattle First National Bank with a note that it had been found in a safe deposit box there.

The Spirit of Plains

WASHINGTON — The stately, white Baptist church blends naturally into the peaceful rural setting of Plains, Ga. Its traditional steeple and stained-glass windows are indistinguishable from thousands of other small-town churches throughout the South.

But this particular little church has a parishioner who may become President: Jimmy Carter.

Our roving reporter, Hal Bernton, joined the Carter family for Sunday services. He sat next to the candidate's mother, Lillian Carter, but moved away after she whispered politely: "Jimmy usually sits here."

A smiling Carter, accompanied by his Secret Service guards, arrived in time to teach his Sunday school class. He embraced a parishioner, turned to wave to a photographer and then entered through a side door.

He was the ideal Sunday school teacher, with his easiness of manner, his engaging sincerity, the way his whole personality smiled every time he grinned. He had a gift, too, for expressing himself movingly and for reducing great issues to simple moral principles.

Other members of the congregation still talk about how he stood up for those principles during the turmoil over civil rights in 1964. As a church deacon, he missed the critical meeting when the other 11 deacons and the pastor voted unanimously to ban blacks from the congregation.

The next Sunday, Carter stood before the congregation and urged them to reverse the decision of the deacons. The congregation disregarded his appeal and voted to segregate their church. The Carters cast five of the six dissenting votes.

Carter's spirited sister, Gloria Spann, resigned from the church in protest. But Jimmy Carter stayed on.

Racial segregation in churches had become a largely forgotten political issue in the 1970s. But Detroit's black mayor, Coleman Young, speaking in Carter's behalf, accused his presidential rival, Morris Udall, of belonging to a church that discriminates against blacks. Carter refused to repudiate the statement.

In fact, Udall's church welcomes blacks to its services. Carter's church, despite his objections, does not. His sister told Bernton that the only blacks she can recall attending the church were a Secret Service man and a Georgia state trooper who were there to protect Carter.

Bernton also visited Koinonia, a small, closed religious community six miles down the road from Plains. Koinonia is a mixed community of blacks and whites, who practice a simple communal Christianity.

During the passions of the late 1950s, many of the more traditional residents of the area viewed Koinonia as a hotbed of radical and dangerous philosophies. The brotherhood taught there was regarded by some as outright Communism.

Koinonia's produce market was bombed, and snipers periodically fired random shots at the community's small houses. The people of Plains even organized a boycott against Koinonia's products. Most merchants and farmers refused to do business with the community. Those who dared to deal with Koinonia found their own products boycotted.

Florence Jordan, widow of Koinonia's founder, told Bernton: "We are Southerners, so we understood ... I can count on the fingers of my right hand the number of people who stood behind us during those difficult times, and Jimmy Carter was not one."

But the candidate's mother told Bernton that in those troubled times her son offered to buy the farm's produce if there was no one else who would buy it.

Bernton concluded after spending almost a week visiting with Carter's neighbors that the Democratic front runner is a decent man, with granite in his character but a limit to his vision.

HAYS HOTLINE: Wayne Hays, the Ohio Democrat in trouble for allegedly keeping a mistress on the congressional payroll, may have tipped his hand two years ago.

When Secretary of State Henry Kissinger called him early one morning, Hays answered the phone with a bright, "Hello, honey."

FORD FLICK: Two weeks before the world premiere last April of the Watergate movie, "All The President's Men," Robert Redford rejected a White House request to give Gerald Ford a private advance showing.

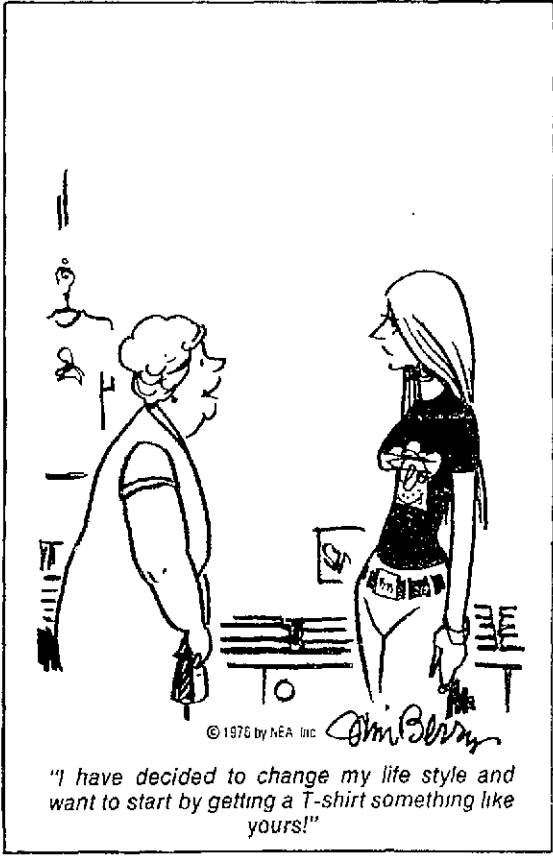

Co-star Redford told White House officials politely but firmly that Ford could have free tickets to the premiere at Washington's Kennedy Center where he could see the film "just like everyone else."

Ford didn't show up for the premiere, and at this writing neither he nor his wife has seen the movie.

In one scene, Ford is shown announcing Richard Nixon's nomination in 1972. Actually, a second Ford scene was considered as the film's finale. It would have shown Ford bidding goodbye to the disgraced Nixon as he flew from the White House in a helicopter.

Redford told us he vetoed the scene for artistic, not political, reasons.

sure bet as big as they say. No bet."

A stranger walked into the Horseshoe with $1,000 and a feeling. He played Blackjack. At dawn he departed with $400,000 and no feeling. In the morning, a Texan and wife shot craps for large stakes. They lost $175,000 before lunch and laughed their way through a large salad.

Doyle Brunson slid his belly into a chair beside Binion. He keeps that stomach well-nourished on poker. He has a wife and kids and a house. He plays everything with a cool head and a steady hand.

Doyle's weakness is golf. He's a 2-handicap. He will play a man $10,000 a hole. Before he does it, he researches his adversary all the way down to the man's horoscope for today. Not long ago he lost a big one!

He met a hustling bookie in Miami. They watched each other play. Doyle knew he could take the man at his best. The bookie suggested $10,000 a hole at La Gorce. "I have never played La Gorce," Brunson said.

The bookie shrugged. "Neither have I." Out of the goodness of his heart, the bookie paid for lunch, greens fees and caddies. The play was fairly even. On the final hole, Doyle said, "It's a long par four. I'm not hitting my woods well, as you've seen. I'll bet $90,000 I take you on this one."

Thus, $180,000 was riding on four strokes. Doyle hit two super woods and was on the green in two, 28 feet from the hole. The bookie was in the rough in two. On the pitch shot, the bookie was 25 feet from the pin.

"How does it look?" Doyle said to his caddy. The man crouched. He frowned. "Against the grain," he said. "You'll have to hit it, sir." Doyle lined it up. He tapped it. The ball rolled on and on, nine feet past the pin.

Both were lying three. The bookie frowned, looked frightened, and lagged a snakey putt to within seven inches of the stick. He asked permission with his eyes and tapped it in for a bogie.

"How does it look?" Doyle asked his caddy. "Drift to the left, sir." "That's funny. It looks right to me." He played it to draft left, it swung right. Doyle knew he would miss the next putt. He knew why.

The bookie had bought Doyle's caddy before the match...

Bimbo and Rep. Hays

WASHINGTON (KFS) - This isn't made up. It's not fiction. On Saturday May 23rd on the day that The Washington Post was breaking the big story on Wayne Hays and the Popsie, The Akron (Ohio) Beacon Journal was printing a piece by staff writer Charlene Nevada under the headline: "WAYNE, WAYNE, HE'S THEIR MAN - IF HE CAN'T DO IT, NOBODY CAN." The dateline was Flushing, Ohio, where Mr. Hays resides, and it read:

"When a young woman from Steubenville went to Washington job seeking and wound up a prostitute, her parents were beside themselves with concern and dismay. "So they contacted the only person they hoped could help: their congressman, Wayne L. Hays.

"Hays learned the name and address of the pimp the girl was working for, and together with her parents and the Washington, D.C. police, they went to the man's apartment.

"The girl answered the door but told them the pimp, nicknamed 'Corn silk,' was not home.

"Hays sensed he was, and told the D.C. police to search the apartment. But the police said they didn't have a search warrant, and had no right to search the place. "In that case," Hays recalls, "I said, "Pull your gun and cover me and I'll look."

"Hays found the seared pimp in the bathroom with a butcher knife and announced he was taking the girl home. They exchanged words and the pimp threatened to send his friends after Hays.

"See that?" Hays responded as he pulled a gold chain from his pocket. "That's a gold medal they gave me in Ohio for shooting two pimps. So send your friends on."

GOLDEN QUESTION

This Akron Beacon Journal dispatch only adds more questions to a story that has too many already. Is it, for instance, really true, that Ms. Elizabeth Ray, the self-proclaimed reigning bimbo of Capitol Hill, the lady who's set feminism back 50 years, really doesn't know how to answer a telephone as she claims? If they give gold medals in Ohio for shooting pimps, what do they give you for knocking off a bank robber? How did Corn silk get his nickname? What does Wayne Hays have against pimps?

So far the congressman from Flushing has had the short end of the publicity stick. Not only has he been asked to resign by one of his colleagues on national television, but many uncomplimentary stories are circulating about him and not one word of criticism about Ms. Ray. They're even commiserating with her and criticizing him for his alleged custom of walking into the apartment and taking her right into the sleeping chamber without stopping for conversation in the living room. It's the first time in the history of our Congress that one of its members has been attacked for shortcutting the foreplay. Who wants to talk current events in the living room with a girl who admits she doesn't even know how to answer a telephone?

Hays is also taking fire for using public money to create this particular staff role. Well, what other duties could he assign her? A girl who can't use a princess telephone probably isn't a very good cook. Nobody's criticizing her. There's been great lachrymosity over the fact that when she's at work doing her thing in bed with the boss, the congressman keeps one eye cocked on the digital clock on the dresser. This is used to demonstrate what a hardhearted man, what an insensitive human being he is. It could be as easily argued that it only goes to show that Ms. Ray isn't much better between the sheets than she is at touch-tone dialing.

VALUE FOR THE DOLLAR?

If she were good at her work would he be looking at the clock? Congressman Hays has a reputation for being the most foul dispositioned, evil-tempered grouch in the House of Representatives. If Ms. Ray is really as competent at her line of work as she would have us believe, wouldn't it follow that Wayne Hays would smile from time to time? Perhaps that Federal grand jury that's investigating the Ohio Pimp Popper should look into Ms. Ray's conduct. She's as much a public employee as Mr. Hays. Has she been taking her work seriously? Is she giving value for the taxpayer's dollar? After all she had a very responsible position. Her job was to keep a major congressional committee chairman, a man of high seniority, a person frequently referred to as one of the most powerful people in this city, her job was to keep him happy, thereby facilitating the legislative process and the cause of good government generally.

Freeman Readers Write

Arterial Request

Editor's note: The following letter was sent to State Senator Richard E. Schermerhorn with a copy to the Daily Freeman. Dear Dick:

As you suggested in our telephone conversation Friday, I am sending you this letter briefly outlining our objections to the proposed North-South arterial route through the City of Kingston.

We understand your concern in providing jobs at this time by initiating construction projects, but we feel that there are many projects of a more significant nature than the proposed North-South arterial, such as improving Route 209, the addition to the Newburgh, Beacon Bridge, and the fixing of the railroad bridge at Poughkeepsie, to mention a few.

Many factors have changed since the arterial was proposed that would have influenced the decision to build. Namely, the decreasing of the traffic in the area, the renovating of the present bridge across the Rondout Creek and the unwillingness of the town of Esopus and the town of Ulster to implement the arterial outside the city limits.

I have been informed that when the state begins the maintenance of the new Rondout Bridge the maintenance of the old bridge will be the responsibility of Ulster County. As you know, bridge maintenance has increased considerably in the past few years, increasing a 62.8% from the year 1973 to 1974. Ulster County would be saddled with the additional expense and couldn't get out from under it because even the cost of dismantling the bridge would be prohibitive.

In addition to the new Rondout Bridge, there are four additional bridges proposed on this 2.48 mile arterial. They are a bridge over the arterial at Delaware Avenue, a railroad bridge over the arterial in the proximity of Delaware Avenue and two bridges over Lincoln street.

Considerable excavation is necessary in the Delaware Avenue area to provide a reasonably good grade for the arterial. This is the same area which has a proposed half cloverleaf. In one spot, the road bed will be thirty feet below the terrain and what is even more concerning is that this area consists of a good portion of rock.

In matter of fact, it was proposed to take some fill out of that area but the proposal was halted when they struck rock very close to the surface.

The arterial will go through Kingman Park and could adversely affect Kingman Pond, which has been designated a wet land area. There is also a national little league field that could be affected in the park area.

According to the Freeman article, this project will take 97 properties off the City of Kingston tax rolls, including sixty residential and four commercial buildings. This affects some of the few remaining areas in Kingston that can be developed to increase the tax base of the city.

Would you please look into the situation to see whether this project can be terminated? At the very least, a new public hearing should be held because it has been eight years since the last public hearing and the environmental action plan states that there should be another public hearing if "there is an unusually long period of delay in progression of the project."

If the project is considered necessary by the Department of Transportation in Albany, then an alternate route should be seriously considered. It is my understanding that at the time the route was proposed, there was considerable opposition by the owners of the Cement Company to the use of unused cement company land. Since then, the ownership has changed and the activity at the company has decreased significantly. Perhaps at this time, the present owner would be more receptive to the use of their land.

In summation, we are against the program because an estimated 36 million dollars will be spent to build a 2.48 mile road starting nowhere and going nowhere with the adverse affect on the tax rolls of the City of Kingston and the displacing of residents from their homes.

Please look into this matter at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM A. JACKSON,
CHAIRMAN
ULSTER COUNTY CONSERVATIVES
Member State Executive Committee

Welfare Problem

Dear Editor:

Just thought all the outraged politicians, would-be politicians, and the rest of the welfare know-it-alls would like to know I've been cut off medicare (the only assistance I ever asked for, having found myself ill and broke).

You see, besides admitting I saved a couple hundred from my expired unemployment checks, I was foolish enough to admit I had a $1,000 life insurance policy to cover my burial (in the event I become overly despondent with the economic situation). That's $1,000. face value, folks, cash value being $184.00. Seems this life insurance made me too rich to qualify. Wish that you were all as well-to-do.

Dear Editor:

Compliments to the Daily Freeman for its Ulster County Cooperative Extension page in Sunday, May 23rd's Freeman.

As a 4-H leader, I was delighted to see some reference to its activities. I think the public only thinks of 4-H at Fair time in August and features of this type will make them more aware of the wonderful projects and activities the youngsters of the area are doing all year round.

It not only delights the members now to have this type of publicity, but news articles added to their records can benefit them greatly if they desire to strive for awards such as Linda Crisman attained.

You've made many 4-H Clubs happy, I'm sure. Please keep up this type of coverage.

How a Father Feels

Dear Editor:

My 13 year old son Carl suffered a double fracture of the skull on May 21, 1974 and partial brain removal on June 17th of that year. He is undergoing rehabilitation in Blythedale Children's Hospital in Valhalla, N.Y.

On Friday the 21st, after two years, my husband wrote the enclosed poem, which I would appreciate if you could find space to place in your newspaper. We do subscribe to your paper, as many of my friends do in the Kerhonkson and Accord area. I would like them to see it and read it to see how a father feels about his son. It would be nice also since Father's Day is coming up soon.

Tears by Arthur J. Steinhofner
Many tears have been shed by us all!
But tears alone do not reveal what's inside.

Since our son had his fall.
A little on the heavy side,

For he was not considered slim,
Young and lovable to all that knew him.
Tears still come and prayers are still said,

For it has now two years since our son hurt his head.

A strong and hard fight, he has fought all the way,

For he wants to come home for good some day.

A long way to go, with a tear in his eye,
To come home to stay and not say goodbye!

That will be our son, who they said was to die.

Tears still come from all that knew
That our lovable little boy will come home

To us like new.

Thanking you,

Is Democracy A Failure?

Dear Editor:

Having analyzed the threat of communism as a military threat, and having invested about $1.6 trillion to counter it, the United States has systematically starved our own society. The health of the American economy has been to satisfy the military complex and the industrialists.

Too Many Errors

Dear Editor:

After many evenings of reading the Freeman and being irritated by the frequency of errors in typing and inefficient proofreading, I am finally driven to the point of complaining. The issue of Sunday, May 23rd seemed excessive in errors. The issue of Tuesday, May 25th, only sixteen pages in total, had at least eight errors on the front page. It seems to me that whoever does these jobs needs to be more accurate and careful. A job is usually not worth having done if it isn't done properly.

Sincerely,

MRS. ARTHUR CASEY
Hurley

Editor's note: You're right—but please bear with us. We're changing to a computer-based word processing system and our temporary inexperience with the new equipment is producing more typographical errors than usual. Some "typos" are inevitable in a publication as complex and rapidly-produced as a newspaper, but as we become skillful with our new tools the Freeman should be more error-free than ever.

There is now abundant evidence that the American model of so-called democracy is a failure as an example for most poor developing countries. If we take as the criterion of success the welfare of the majority of people—literacy, nutrition, health care and job security, the communists that we oppose seem to do far better than the free world governments we support.

If we do not have a better answer for poor developing countries, why should they follow us? Our rulers should study the things happening in Angola, Mozambique, and other poor countries in Africa, also those at our back door in South America. We should stop supporting racist countries like South Africa, and military fascist coups ala Chile. Our country will be isolated one hundred per cent, and will become not second, but third in power. Remember when England controlled the seas and one third of the world? Poor England now.

Fallout From Hays Affair

The biggest bomb in that first Washington Post story about Rep. Wayne Hays' mistress was buried down in paragraph 48.

That's where Elizabeth Ray, Hays' $14,000 tax-paid office playmate, (I can't type, I can't file, I can't even answer the phone.), said she knew of 10 or 15 girls on Capitol Hill who were in the same position.

One of the households where this buried bomb had an impact was that of Rep. Cyrus Fenwick, whose wife, Felice, begin to wonder about the duties of a blonde dazzler by the name of Rosabelle Bunting....

Fenwick was surprised to see his wife at his office door. She almost never visited him at work.

Hello dear! Fenwick said, getting up to greet her. What are you doing here?

Is there anything wrong with my coming to your office? Felice asked in a tone that made Fenwick uneasy.

No, of course not. Uh, what do you want?

Well, I thought I should get to know your staff better. A congressman's wife ought to learn more about her husband's office affairs.

Fenwick's heart began to beat faster. Was her use of the words "office affairs" deliberate? Was Rosabelle in the office? (He had told her to appear for at least two hours a day.) If Rosabelle was there, would she make some verbal slip? She wasn't the brightest girl in Washington.

We're terribly busy these days, dear, Fenwick said. You know—the Bicentennial and the election and....

That's all right, Felice said. I'll just wander around and talk to people. I'd like to find out more about what they do.

Okay, Fenwick said, trying to conceal his dismay. He returned to his desk and quickly dialed Rosabelle's extension.

Rosabelle? Oh, you are there! Damn! Look, there's a serious problem! You're going to have to...What? A woman just walked in? Oh, my God! Fenwick whispered. That's my wife! Be careful!

Fenwick hung up and put his head in his hands.

Felice looked around Rosabelle's office, noting the thick wall-to-wall carpet, the polished wood desk, the long black leather couch, and the red electric typewriter.

Do you know who I am? Felice asked.

I just heard, Rosabelle replied nervously, hanging up the phone.

Of course, Felice said. By the way, I have a letter here that I wrote in longhand at the house. Can you type it for me?

Rosabelle took the letter and stared at her typewriter.

You will have to plug it in first, Felice said.

Oh, yeah! Rosabelle exclaimed. Where?

I wouldn't know. How do you usually do it?

Uh, well, I don't really...uh, do a lot of typing. I'm more like a clerk.

I see. Then have someone else type this letter and file it in your boss's stuffed shirt. Felice walked out.

Rosabelle read the letter. It said: Dear Cyrus, After you fire Rosabelle today, thereby saving the taxpayers $14,000 a year, I want you to deposit twice that amount in my bank account for a trip to Europe—with a 'friend.'

I shall require the same sum every year. This arrangement will spare both of us the embarrassment of a front page story in the newspapers. Your wife, Felice.

California Hanky-Panky

Ronald Reagan got hit below the belt - the Sun Belt - in the Kentucky and Tennessee primaries. He wasn't supposed to lose in these border reaches of what is described by the new demographers as "Southern Rimland."

But the defeats were more nominal than real; they had little effect on the delegate count. The Washington conservative weekly, Human Events, which has all along been making the most accurate projections of the relative Reagan-Ford delegate standings, had updated its figures after the Michigan and Maryland primaries and made an informed guess that Reagan would have 1,144 votes going into the convention to Ford's 1,115. (It will take 1,130 to win the nomination.)

Reagan's losses in Kentucky and Tennessee, which were headline matters, did not deprive him of any significant number of delegates - he got 18 to Ford's 19 in Kentucky, and (at a tentative count) 22 in Tennessee to Ford's 21. Tennessee, in fact, was a practical tie.

see to Ford's 76. Ford still led because of the "uncommitted" New York delegates who announced for him the day before the six-state primaries, but the Human Events projection had allowed for that.

Everything points, then, to a narrow Reagan triumph on June 8 that would carry him to a possible first-ballot convention success. He counts on a victory in his home state of California to offset Ford successes in Ohio and New Jersey. But even as the ripe fruit seemed about to drop into Reagan's lap, the possibility loomed that a last-minute change in the rules would make it an entirely different ball game. In a desperation move, Republican State Senator Robert S. Stevens of Los Angeles introduced a bill in the California legislature that would have substituted a proportional representation distribution of the convention delegates for the present winner-take-all provision.

The bill died, but it gave rise to some pertinent speculation. As a fair-minded outsider, Democratic Gov. Brown would probably have vetoed it. Still, in the bitterness of a final struggle, one never knows. Brown is a candidate for president too, and if the lightning should strike him he might prefer to run against Ford rather than Reagan in a November finale.

only way he could get "half" in a winner-take-all state would be to alter the rules. No sooner had the Stevens measure gone to the Senate floor than Nofziger had a battery of phones manned to bore in on Republican legislators. The pressure was such that State Sen. Dennis Carpenter, one of the bill's supporters, and Sen. Stevens himself were forced to relinquish support of their own amendment.

As a "dirty work" proposition, the idea of changing the rules two weeks before a primary belongs to 1972, not 1976. There hasn't been much written about hanky-panky this year, but it hasn't disappeared. In North Carolina unnamed telephone calls led to the cancellation of Reagan buses.

One must expect this sort of thing in any heated election, but to change the primary representative rules in the biggest state in the union at the eleventh hour would amount to considerably more than mere prankishness. It would, in fact, be close to the same sort of major dirty work that won for Eisenhower in 1952, when the false shout of "Thou shalt not steal" robbed Sen. Robert Taft of delegates that rightfully belonged to him.

If Ford hoped to get "half" the California delegation, maybe Reagan ought to revise his strategy and go into Ohio and New Jersey in an active quest for legitimate delegates. Even with California in his pocket, Reagan might need a few "nickel-and-dime" delegate strays in the Northeast.

Major hanky-panky in California may be no ultimate worry. But the Human Events count in favor of Reagan doesn't leave much of a margin. Reagan should "come East" for a final fling.

Take stock in America.

The Human Events delegates projection was not seriously disturbed by the Kentucky-Tennessee results for the simple reason that Reagan recouped in Nevada, Idaho and Oregon what he had lost in the Southern border states. Alaska had let the Human Events calculators down in its non-primary delegate awards, but in Arkansas Reagan staged a bit of a romp.

So, after the dust had settled for the two-week wait for the final primaries in California, Ohio and New Jersey, Reagan had picked up 100 delegates in Arkansas, Idaho, Kentucky, Nevada, Oregon and Tennessee.

On The Alert

Fortunately for the Reagan campaign, the Reagan staff, sparked by Lyn Nofziger, was right on the ball once Sen. Stevens had introduced his "sleeper" bill. Jerry Ford had inadvertently tipped Reagan headquarters off to some possible impending hanky-panky when he said that he expected half of the California vote. The

and will stay away from the convention, as he did in 1968 and in 1972 (except for a speech at the gathering after George McGovern's nomination when his call for a unified party brought cheers at the time, but was subsequently disastrously ignored).

The pollsters have finally accepted Kennedy's refusals to seek the presidency and no longer include him in their popularity contests. He has remained so distant from this year's politics that he even declined to help his brother-in-law's brief campaign (thereby virtually assuring its failure). TOOTHY PROBLEM

Jimmy Carter, the most likely presidential nominee, has hinted at several possibilities as his running mate, but never once suggested that he was interested in Kennedy. Those who know his thinking say he would never ask Kennedy. There may be more serious reasons, but for one thing the ticket could have too many teeth.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey has indicated privately he still likes the sound of a Humphrey-Kennedy ticket, but the prospects of a Humphrey nomination are not bright. Furthermore, if Humphrey did win the nomination, he would be under great pres-

The Kennedy Power Fades

WASHINGTON (KFS) - The Democratic presidential convention is now little more than a month away, and it comes as something of a shock to realize that it may be the first such party convocation in 20 years at which the Kennedy name may play no role at all.

Sen. Edward Kennedy has never generated the high convention excitement of John Kennedy's fight for the vice presidential nomination in 1956, or his nomination for president in 1960, or Robert Kennedy's emotional appearance in tribute to his dead brother in 1964. But in both 1968 and 1972 there were large and vocal cadres of supporters ready to mount a draft if Edward Kennedy would just give the word; he was the first to be offered the vice presidency by the nominee both times. BELATED DENIAL

A minor stir was created recently by a report that Kennedy might be available for a spot on the ticket after all, and some Kennedy remarks that appeared to be pokes at Jimmy Carter. After mild disclaimers that allowed the publicity to build, Kennedy finally issued a firm denial to the effect that he was not involved in a stop-Carter movement and wouldn't accept a presidential or vice presidential draft.

There are always going to be people who won't believe him, although he has certainly stuck to his position in the past. And if he announced suddenly at the last minute that he had changed his mind, he would attract some support, but it is doubtful he could prevail over a candidate who has actively campaigned in the primaries.

On balance, however, it now appears that Kennedy will not be a factor at the convention - and there is little visible desire within the party that he should.

Kennedy only attracted 3 per cent of the vote in Oregon and 4 per cent in Nebraska, two states where his name was placed on the ballot despite his protests. In both cases he got less than Humphrey, who is also a non-candidate.

Kennedy is not a delegate sure to select Carter as his running mate. Carter has earned it, and close to half the convention would be delegates who came there as his backers and who would be furious at the choice of a ticket composed of two men who never faced the electorate in the primaries.

There is evidence that Kennedy deliberately started the recent speculation, even though he wound up denying it, because he senses he may be losing the political clout that the aura of future power gave him.

He will never be just another Senator. But time waits for no man, not even a Kennedy.

There have been too many years, too many mistakes, too many changes, and too much inactivity since the Kennedy dynasty was shaped and came to dominate Democratic politics. In all likelihood, the 1976 presidential ticket will feature two fresh faces. They will become national names; the future will be theirs.

And the Kennedy power will then be measured not by its own terms, but by theirs.

and will stay away from the convention, as he did in 1968 and in 1972 (except for a speech at the gathering after George McGovern's nomination when his call for a unified party brought cheers at the time, but was subsequently disastrously ignored).

The pollsters have finally accepted Kennedy's refusals to seek the presidency and no longer include him in their popularity contests. He has remained so distant from this year's politics that he even declined to help his brother-in-law's brief campaign (thereby virtually assuring its failure). TOOTHY PROBLEM

Jimmy Carter, the most likely presidential nominee, has hinted at several possibilities as his running mate, but never once suggested that he was interested in Kennedy. Those who know his thinking say he would never ask Kennedy. There may be more serious reasons, but for one thing the ticket could have too many teeth.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey has indicated privately he still likes the sound of a Humphrey-Kennedy ticket, but the prospects of a Humphrey nomination are not bright. Furthermore, if Humphrey did win the nomination, he would be under great pres-

The mantel was a moveable shelter to protect men attacking a fortified place. The British engineer Moncrieff used prefabricated mantels in the 1776 Charleston expedition against the Americans. They were 6 feet high, 14 feet long, stood on 3 feet, and took 18 men to carry. When put into place, the World Almanac recalls, mantels formed the inner walls of a battery or redoubt.

Third Year Cadet Guilty, Expulsion Recommended

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — A board of army officers found one third-year West Point cadet guilty of cheating late Tuesday and recommended his expulsion, sources said. A second cadet was acquitted and the case of a third was held over for further consideration.

The verdicts were the first to emerge from the current cheating scandal, which may prove to be the worst in the history of the U.S. Military Academy. The names of the cadets involved were not made public. The three cadets were the first of 48 who are to go before five-member officer boards for hearings on charges filed by cadet honor boards.

Earlier Tuesday, Internal Review Panels set up to look into more possible cheating handed up accusations against 46 more cadets, officials said. The charges from Internal Review Panels brought to 98 the number of juniors accused of collaborating on the March project in electrical engineering.

The panels found insufficient evidence to sustain charges against 31 other juniors. They were still investigating possible charges against at least 21 more members of the class.

The review board action clouded U.S. Military Academy graduation ceremonies scheduled for today, with Secretary of the Army Martin Hoffmann slated as the prime speaker.

Hoffmann's topic was expected to be "Honor" — the heart of the honor code against lying, cheating, stealing or tolerating those acts that the cadets are charged with violating.

Lt. Gen. Sidney Berry, academy superintendent, set up the Internal Review Panels after it became apparent that the 88-member Cadet Honor Committee could not make further inquiries because of graduation and final exams. Half of the committee was to graduate today.

About 300 juniors at the 174-year-old academy have been ordered to remain on the post for a week to 10 days after graduation so they can be interviewed by the review panels or called as witnesses at the officer board hearings. Another 500 had been scheduled to stay for summer duty.

The first officer board began work last Friday hearing witnesses and taking evidence in cases of the three cadets. A fourth cadet had also been scheduled to have his case heard, but instead had it postponed when his civilian attorney was not ready.

A second board is to begin work Thursday hearing the cases of six more of the 48 cadets. A spokesman said each subsequent board will begin hearings as the one before it finishes, but two boards will not work at once because of demands on attorneys and staff.

The cadets are provided army attorneys but may hire civilian lawyers if they wish.

Cadet honor boards accused 52 juniors of cheating after the electrical engineering department faculty said a review of papers from the take-home problem showed similarities in many of the answers.

Four cadets resigned rather than face officer boards. They still face possible two-year hitches as army enlisted men.

After several cadets claimed the cheating was more widespread than the Cadet Honor Committee's investigation of 117 cases showed, Berry ordered the department to cross-check all papers for indications of cheating and 98 additional possible cases were brought to light.

The charges by the Internal Review Panel announced Tuesday came from that group, officials said.

Any junior or senior cadet charged with an honor code violation may resign before or during officer board hearings, but may be required to serve two years as an enlisted man. Cadets convicted of violation may also have to serve on active duty after they are expelled.

Computer Goofs On Taxes

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — Cache County thought tax collection would be faster and easier with the help of a computer. It didn't turn out that way.

As a result of computer troubles, the county missed a legal deadline for mailing out property tax notices.

State Law requires that the notices be sent to property owners by May 20, but County Treasurer Curtis Miner said Tuesday they hadn't yet been mailed, and probably wouldn't be for another 30 days.

Dear Abby

Needs Lawyer Not Preacher

DEAR ABBY: My beautiful 18-year-old daughter is engaged to marry a 22-year-old, conceited fellow with good looks and no character. She and Bud planned to be married in August.

Tonight, my daughter tells me that Bud wants to get married next week! He says a girl he saw only a few times is suing him for the support of a child she claims is his. He says it's not his.

I told my daughter to forget Bud as there is nothing but trouble ahead. He tells her that if she marries him right away, it will fix things. What do you think?—WORRIED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I think if your daughter marries this fellow hastily to supposedly "fix things," the "thing" that could need fixing later will be HER marriage. Bud needs the services of a lawyer far more than he needs those of a preacher.

DEAR ABBY: This morning I took a test for a job in a local school district. I was one of about 20 women.

Before the test began, I heard several women saying that they really didn't need the work; they just wanted something to do while their children were in school. One even said, "I don't need the money."

Well, I DO need the money. My husband has been laid off, and we have a family to feed.

Please tell these women who take jobs just to keep "busy" that volunteer work will keep them just as busy without taking the food out of the mouths of people who need it. Thank you.—NEEDS TO WORK

DEAR NEEDS: I couldn't have said it better than you. DEAR ABBY: In response to your decision to sign the Living Will, Dr. Peale asserted that there is a variety of opinions on this issue, but that the prevailing Protestant view would be that God alone should determine life and death. The individual should be in the hands of God, who gave life and whose function it is to take it.

Human beings are not puppets. God has endowed us with minds that He expects us to use wisely and responsibly. We decide when to consult a doctor and whether or not to have surgery performed.

The decision to keep patients alive by artificial means is not made by God, but by doctors. They assume they are carrying out God's will and have been supported by the courts. They become arbiters in life and death.

To declare that "God alone should determine life and death" is simplistic and naive. We must accept responsibility for our actions and be guided by what we believe is God's will and purpose.

The Psalmist did not ask that God keep him alive forever on earth, but said: "The days of our years are threescore years and ten, and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away."—THE REV. ERNEST O. MARTIN, THE WAYFARERS' CHAPEL (SWEDENBORGIAN), PALOS VERDES, CALIF.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope.

A smart way for you to save. From Tri/Valley Growers in California.

Two Major Appointments Made at Rotron

WOODSTOCK — Two key managerial appointments have been announced by Charles J. Lawson Jr., president of Rotron Inc.

Ralph Stevens has been appointed to the post of general manager, Industrial Products Division. Formerly the firm's general sales manager, Stevens will now head a manufacturing division with its own technical and sales groups.

Rotron designs and manufactures precision air-moving devices. The Industrial Products Division manufactures heavy-duty blowers for the pollution control, materials handling, packaging, conveying and related industries.

Stevens, who lives in Kingston, joined Rotron in California as an application engineer in 1964.

In addition to Stevens' appointment, Lawson announced that Paul Faxon has been promoted to general sales manager. Faxon had been the firm's western regional sales manager, the position he occupied since joining the company in 1973. He now lives in Burbank, Calif., but will relocate to the Woodstock area shortly.

Buyers' Loan Market In New-Car Purchases

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Large stockpiles of compact cars and an increase by the nation's banks in funds for new-car loans have combined to put consumers in the driver's seat, according to a statement released Tuesday by the American Bankers Association.

A recent national survey by the ABA showed 93 per cent of the nation's banks are expanding their funds for new-car loans to consumers, and 7 per cent are planning to maintain their current level.

New-car loans account for more than $32 billion of the $80 billion outstanding in consumer loans by banks.

"Prospective buyers of small cars should shop around for their financing just as they shop around for a new car," said Robert L. Jaynes, director of the ABA's instalment lending division.

The latest reported national average for annual interest rates on new-car loans is 11.18 per cent for banks, and 13.18 per cent for finance companies.

All Braves Needed Was a Well-Pitched Game

By UPI
It turned out that the Atlanta Braves didn't need any promotional giveaways to snap their losing streak—just an old fashioned well-pitched game.
It came from an unexpected source Tuesday night when Roger Moret, the skinny lefthander acquired during the winter from the Boston Red Sox, pitched a six-hitter in a 9-1 triumph over the San Diego Padres. The Braves went into the game with four straight losses after which clubowner Ted Turner announced fans with rain checks would be admitted free to Atlanta Stadium until the Braves won a game.
Moret, who was 14-3 for the Red Sox last season and 41-18 for six seasons in the majors, has been hit hard this season and only last Sunday gave up five runs and six hits in two thirds of an inning.
He started Tuesday night because Dick Ruthven missed a turn in the rotation due to a minor ailment and it looked like a repeat of Sunday's drubbing until Atlanta Coach Herm Starrette went to the mound in the first inning.

"I told him in no uncertain terms to forget about his slow curve and to keep throwing his hard curve," explained Starrette. "He's been reluctant to throw the hard curve because he thought he couldn't control it."
This time Moret followed the coach's advice and for the first time looked like the pitcher the Braves expected him to be. He got out of the first-inning jam after yielding a run and then shut out the Padres the rest of the way. The victory raised his record to 2-1 and, quite literally, put the Atlanta club back in business.
Earl Williams hit a three run homer in the first inning for the Braves, who dealt Brent Strom his third loss against five victories. Jim Wynn had three hits and Jerry Royster two for the Braves, who for all their losing ways are only four games out of fourth place in the National League West.

Philadelphia defeated Chicago 6-1, Houston shaded Cincinnati 2-1, Pittsburgh edged New York 3-2, St. Louis beat Montreal 6-2 and San Francisco drubbed Los Angeles 6-0 in other NL games.
Phillies 6, Cubs 1
Ron Reed allowed six hits and drove in two runs for the Phillies in a game halted by rain in the bottom of the sixth. Greg Luzinski hit a two run homer and Reed and Dick Allen had two hits each to lead Philadelphia's nine hit attack. Steve Renko suffered the loss for Chicago.
Astros 2, Reds 1
Joacquin Andujar, who spent five years in the Cincinnati system, pitched a two hitter against the Reds, allowing only singles by Doug Flynn in the fifth and

Tony Perez with two out in the ninth, to score his first major league victory. Houston broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth when Rob Andrews tripled and scored on Cesar Cedeno's single. Pat Zachry took his first loss for the Reds.
Cards 6, Expos 2
Ted Simmons drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a single and Ken Rudolph contributed a two-run double to the Cardinals' 10-hit attack. Pete Falcone pitched a five-hitter, raising his record to 3-4 for St. Louis. Dan Warthen lost his fifth decision against one win for Montreal.
Giants 6, Dodgers 0
Ed Halicki pitched a two hitter to win his third game against eight losses for the Giants, who nipped Don Sutton for 10 hits. Gary Matthews, who had three hits, scored two early runs and also drove in two insurance runs in the ninth.

Pirates' Willie Stargell exercises, then amuses himself and fans with yo-yo

Candelaria Is Even Fooling Himself

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Candelaria is fooling plenty of people — apparently including himself.
The Pittsburgh Pirates' 6 foot 7 lefthander insists he isn't a strikeout pitcher. But most rivals and the records say he is.
"I don't consider myself a strikeout pitcher," Candelaria said Tuesday night after pitching a six-hitter and striking out 12 in the Pirates' 3-2 victory over the New York Mets. "I'm mostly a control pitcher."

Candelaria, however, has struck out 47 batters in 59 innings while compiling a 4-3 record and last season struck out 95 batters in 121 innings after being brought up from Charleston. In addition he struck out 14 batters in a losing effort against the Cincinnati Reds in the National League playoffs.
The Pirates victory Tuesday night enabled them to remain 6½ games be hind the first place Philadelphia Phillies, who are threatening a runaway in the National League East. The loss dropped the Mets one game under 500 at 24-25 and 10½ games out of first place.

Bob Robertson's two run homer and an RBI single by Richie Zisk backed Candelaria's pitching as the Pirates pinned Jerry Koosman with his second defeat against six wins. Robertson's homer came with Bill Robinson on base in the fourth inning.

Joe Torre accounted for both New York runs with homers in the first and ninth innings.
"I throw a lot of strikes and that's why they hit so many homers off me," explained Candelaria. "The ball on which Torre hit his first homer was a mistake—I got the ball up. I don't know how he hit the second homer. I thought it was a good pitch because I got it down."

New, Unpleasant Woe for Top-Ranked Netmen

PARIS (UPI) — The increasingly crowded tennis calendar has given the world's top-ranking players such as Bjorn Borg and John Newcombe a new and unpleasant problem which was highlighted on the second day of the French Open Tennis Championships Tuesday.

As if to prove Borg's point Newcombe, a three-time winner at Wimbledon, went onto the center court the Swede had just vacated and lost to 34-year-old Spaniard Juan Gisbert 2-6, 7-6, 7-5, 6-4.

With all its four seeds still intact, the United States has an excellent chance of seeing one of its players taking the men's singles crown—a feat last achieved back in 1955 by Tony Trabert.

Arthur Ashe, the world's No. 1 ranked player, led the assault on the title, which remains the one major honor he has never gained. In his first round victory against fellow American Raz Reid, 7-6, 6-3, 7-5, Ashe looked a long way from achieving that goal, however.

Both Newcombe and Borg had flown in the day before from the Italian championships in Rome and clearly had trouble adapting to the different conditions.

Both players had schedules so tight that they were unable to put in much practice on the courts on which they have to play their first round matches. Their opponents, often unranked and little-known on the international circuits, can have been practicing for weeks on these courts for their one big chance.

"First round matches have become very difficult," said Borg after his opener against Frenchman Dominique Bedel, who blitzed him 6-0 in the first set before fading before Borg's clay court power.

"You often don't have time to get used to the court and here the balls are very different, too. This gives the player who has been practicing a very good chance," Borg said following his 0-6, 6-0, 6-4, 7-5 win.

Raceway Seeks Gold

MONTICELLO (UPI) — Officials of Monticello Raceway said Tuesday they would be in the running at an auction Wednesday for some $300,000 in gold that they hope to use as a race purse later this summer.

The harness track said it would bid on about 2,362 ounces of gold of 730,000 ounces being offered by the International Monetary Fund in the first of a series of gold auctions to be held over the next two years.

If its bid is successful, the track said the gold would be offered as the purse in the second annual running of the Gold Rush for 3-year-old pacers July 25.

The United States' best chances may come from clay court specialists Harold Solomon and Eddie Dibbs, whose style of pounding away from the baseline has proven effective—though somewhat sporadic for spectators.

In the second round, Solomon will face Sashi Menon of Italy while Dibbs will take on West German Hans Pohmann and Ashe will clash with South Africa's Ray Moore. Brian Gottfried, one of the seven ninth seeds in the complex French system, will take on Lito Alvarez of Argentina.

None of them was scheduled for action Wednesday, however, in the third day's program which saw the last of the seeds—Adriano Panatta, Jan Kodes and Guillermo Vilas—tackle their first round matches and the women taking the court for the first time.

Phoenix Attempts To Square Series

PHOENIX (UPI) — The Phoenix Suns, who finally found the key to beating Boston Sunday, try to even the NBA championship series in game four tonight.
"If it's a physical series, then you have to be physical. If you allow yourself to be pushed and shoved, there's no sense in showing up," Phoenix Coach John MacLeod said after the Suns came out fighting and took a 105-98 win Sunday in a game marked by 65 fouls. It was the first Phoenix victory in seven meetings between the teams this season.
Gar Heard, the Suns' top rebounder, observed, "Boston got away with a lot more in Boston. If we were going to lose, we were going to do it fighting. Nobody wants to get into a fight, but you can only take so much."
Boston Coach Tom Heinsohn suggested the Suns' win was due more to acting than aggressiveness.
"Dick Van Arsdale was acting. Paul Westphal was acting on every play he made to the basket. Somebody would block the shot and they'd fake it, fall down," said Heinsohn. He said his players were "demoralized" because the officials would not let them press.
Veteran John Havlicek still will not be at full speed for the Celtics tonight. Havlicek admitted a hook shot he took in the fourth quarter Sunday aggravated his injured foot, which has limited his action since the playoffs began.
Foul trouble and turnovers have been the biggest problems for the Celtics during the series. They gave up the ball 26 times during Sunday's game and had 72 turnovers in the first three games.

Phoenix rookie center Alvan Adams got loose for 33 points Sunday, 16 during the time Dave Cowens was on the bench with foul trouble. Cowens fouled out with 5:18 left.
"Cowens is the best defensive pivot in the league, so anything would be better to work against," Adams said.
The Suns are trying to regain the form that made them one of the top shooting teams in the league during the season.
"We are a good shooting team and I'm looking forward to us really getting hot against Boston," said Westphal, who made only 8 of 19 field goal attempts Sunday as Phoenix shot 45 per cent for the game after a 34 per cent figure in the first half.
MacLeod said tonight's game is a crucial one for the Suns before the series moves back to Boston Friday.
"We have to get the wins on our court, then hope for a breakthrough in Boston," he said.

A Little Smoke To Go With Fire

By UPI
The California Angels are finally getting a little smoke to go with an abundance of fire.
Nolan Ryan, baseball's most celebrated smoke thrower since Sandy Koufax, gave the Angels their first indication that he has returned to past form Tuesday night and can help fireballing lefty Frank Tanana burn a few opponents.
Ryan ended a one month drought and a personal five game losing streak Tuesday night with a 6-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins, striking out six batters along the way. It marked the first time since April 19 and 20 that Ryan and Tanana have been able to post back to back victories after Tanana clipped the Twins 3-2 Monday night.
Ryan underwent surgery on his right elbow for bone chips at the end of last season and responded with three victories in his first four outings this year before falling apart.
"Everybody who has watched me lately has a different theory on what I'm doing wrong," Ryan explained. "I'd like to think that I am capable of working it out myself. I know one thing—it's taken a lot longer than I ever thought it would."
"When you're in the right groove, you can just feel it. And at times tonight, I felt closer to that groove than I have at any other time this season. I think it's coming."
Ryan said he was bothered during his dry spell with hanging curve balls and he served up one to Minnesota's Larry Hise in the seventh with a man on base and another to Craig Kusick in the eighth with no one on.

But it wasn't enough to overcome the six runs California mustered over the first four innings, chasing rookie Pete Redfern with four of those runs in the fourth. Six different Angels knocked in runs and Bobby Bonds was the only California player to get two hits.
The six strikeouts gave Ryan 91 to leave him three behind AL leader Tanana, who has won seven of 10 games this season.
In other games, Detroit swept Milwaukee 8-7 and 6-5, Texas trounced Chicago 6-5 in 16 innings, Kansas City topped Oakland 5-2 and New York at Boston was rained out.
Tigers 8-6, Brewers 7-5
Detroit staged a three run ninth inning rally to win the first game and a two-run ninth inning rally to win the second game. Tiger bullpen ace John Hiller received credit for both wins while Milwaukee reliever Eduardo Rodriguez took both losses. A wild pitch by Rodriguez supplied Detroit the winning run in the opener and a homer by Ben Oglivie was the deciding run in the nightcap.
Royals 5, A's 2
Amos Otis drove in three runs with his ninth homer and a single to give Kansas City just its 18th victory in Oakland since the Royals joined the American League in 1969. It also gave them a seven game lead over the five time Western Division champions in the AL West.
Rangers 6, White Sox 3
Lenny Randle doubled for his first hit of the game with two out in the 16th inning to score Gene Chies from second and snap a three game Texas losing streak. The win went to Steve Foucault (5-2) for working the final five innings.

Blyleven to Rangers

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Malcontent pitcher Bert Blyleven and shortstop Danny Thompson were peddled by the Minnesota Twins to the Texas Rangers Tuesday night for two pitchers and two infielders.
Twins President Calvin Griffith said right handed pitcher Bill Singer and infielders Roy Smalley and Mike Cuddage would report to Minnesota Wednesday. A fourth player, minor league pitcher Jim Gideon, was to go to Minnesota's Tacoma farm team in the Pacific Coast League.
Blyleven, the Twins' ace right hander the past five years, became dissatisfied with the Griffith organization when he lost in salary arbitration in 1975. Griffith claimed Blyleven was a 500 pitcher, while the hurler contended his earned run average (2.78 lifetime) was among the best in the major leagues.
Blyleven, 25, was playing out his option with Minnesota. He would have become a free agent at the end of the season if he wasn't signed by the Twins or traded.
"I'm glad this is over," said Blyleven, who is 4-5 with a 3.21 ERA with the Twins this year. "There has been a lot of pressure these past few days. I don't know if the pressure has affected my pitching or not. I know something constantly has been in the back of my mind."
The right-hander, who has a 99-90 career record, and Texas owner Brad Corbett reached what Blyleven called "a man to man agreement." Sunday and Griffith completed details of the trade late Tuesday.
The Minnesota owner said he talked to about 10 clubs about possible deals for Blyleven but "Texas came up with the best offer."
"I've got a lot of loyalities in this clubhouse (Twins)," Blyleven said, "but I've got to think of my family and my future, too. Corbett is a good owner. You can relate to him. For example, he wants to help me out promotion-wise and even talked to me about living year-round in Dallas."
Thompson, who was hitting .234, has been hampered by a pulled hamstring muscle this spring. He and Blyleven were to report to the Rangers today in Chicago.
Singer, a veteran, has had arm problems. Smalley is Twins Manager Gene Mauch's nephew. Cuddage was a utility infielder the past two seasons. Gideon, who had a 17-0 record in pitching the

Bert Blyleven

University of Texas to the NCAA title last year, has spent his first pro season at Sacramento in the Pacific Coast League.

Griffith said left handed pitcher Mike Pask would be optioned to Tacoma to make room for the three newly acquired players.

Blyleven pitched his final game for the Twins Monday night. Metropolitan Stadium fans constantly shouted at him and several chanted, "Goodbye, Bert. Goodbye, Bert. Goodbye, Bert. We're glad to see you go."

As Blyleven walked off the mound in a Minnesota uniform for the last time after losing to California 3-2, he raised his finger in an obscene gesture to the taunting crowd.

He made a public apology Tuesday night to his "friends, teammates and the baseball fans of Minnesota."

"I deeply regret my hasty and thoughtless action," Blyleven said in a prepared statement. "Even though I am now leaving to join the Texas Rangers, I will always consider the people of this area to be among the finest and most knowledgeable baseball fans anywhere."

Blyleven signed the statement, "Sincerely and with regrets at leaving Minnesota."

'Girl Talk' Lives...in New Rochelle

SIDELINES

chance to show our product to the 'media-slash-marketing people,' if you follow what I mean."

The major problems of a year ago are solved, Volpe feels. "Wykagyll is a great championship course," he said, implying All American was not quite up to that standard. And he also thought the conduct of this year's tournament would be better.

"As I've heard it, there were a lot of middlemen running things last year...there was no one person in charge."

One other improvement in the Girl Talk Classic is the size of the purse. This year it's $16,000 bigger. Volpe has not found the task of scraping up money to be a difficult one.

He said, "Sponsors are easy to get because this is a terrific business proposition...the best business proposition in sports."

The LPGA? Better than even the men's tour?

"Sure...for one thing there's far less risk. If you have a tournament with a $300,000 purse, then it's going to cost you $600,000 or maybe even a million dollars to run it. That's a lot of risk to put before a businessmen."

And it's money that's the name of the game. "It's absolutely necessary for the sport to grow," said Volpe. "That's the difference between amateur and professional. Out here there's no 'win one for the Gipper.'"

The National Open Long Driving Contest is upon us again with the Northeastern New York PGA competition to be held this Saturday at the Tall Timbers Country Club.

For a fee of $5, golfers may hit three balls which must come to rest within a 40-yard fairway to count. Two sectional and one junior winning golfers whose drives are the longest will advance to one of five regional events where prize money is $1,000 for first, $500 for second and $250 for third. Regional winners will move on to the televised finals where they will compete against the six top placers from the pro tour event for a top prize of $15,000.

Each PGA section will have the junior division with contestants paying a $2 fee for three drives. The junior golfer may also qualify for the national senior finals by winning at a regional senior event.

The story of this year's golf team at Ulster County Community College merits a second look. The squad, you'll recall, dissolved before the season did.

"I just didn't have enough players," said coach Pat McLean.

You have to wonder in a time of tight budgets whether golf has a place on UCCC's list of intercollegiate sports. Golf, even when it's going strong, involves a relatively small percentage of students...students who would play golf whether there was a team or not.

True, golf doesn't cost what some other sports do, but still that money might be better spent elsewhere. A golfer, like a bowler, has many competitive routes open to him, and it doesn't seem like a junior college golf team performs that great a service.

Jack Needs Healthy Walton

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The Portland Trail Blazers of the National Basketball Association Tuesday tabbed veteran coach Jack Ramsay to succeed Lenny Wilkens and lead the Blazers out of the NBA wilderness.

The first ingredient in turning Portland from a six-year also-ran in its short NBA history to a winner, by Ramsay's own formula, is "a healthy Bill Walton."

Ramsay, fired by Buffalo, where he was a winner but couldn't get past the Boston Celtics into the NBA championship series, told his first Portland news conference, "I came here because Portland has great potential and great talent. It is the best coaching opportunity in pro basketball."

U.S. Olympic Boxing Trials Begin Tonight

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Eighty-eight amateur boxers begin competition here tonight for the 11 spots on the U.S. Olympic boxing team.

A four-night tournament that will see eight boxers competing in each of 11 weight divisions, will decide the athletes that go to Montreal to represent America in the July Olympic games.

Quarter-final rounds are scheduled tonight and Thursday night at Riverfront Coliseum with semifinal matches Friday and the 11 championship bouts Saturday night.

American team manager Rollie Schwartz boasts that the 88 competitors represent "undoubtedly the classiest field of amateur American boxers."

"Boxing is one of the most dynamic of Olympic sports," says Schwartz, adding, "There's been a tremendous revival of amateur boxing in America."

Those here already have won preliminary tournaments. Half the field represents the Air Force, Navy, Marines and Army. One-fourth of the entrants are National Golden Gloves and Amateur Athletic Union champs and the rest of the field was selected in two AAU regional tournaments last month.

Schwartz, director of the trials and a long-time leader in American amateur boxing, claims the finest amateur in the world will be competing here.

"Sugar Ray Leonard is the greatest boxer of all time in amateur boxing," figures Schwartz. "He is the classiest amateur I've ever seen."

Leonard, from Palmer Park, Md., boxes in the 139-pound division and Schwartz is counting on him to lead American fighters to several medals at Montreal.

In the heavyweight division, Schwartz said Michael Doakes of Akron, Ohio, is a slight favorite.

Petty Says Janet Guthrie Has Become 'One of the Boys'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Veteran race car driver Richard Petty says Janet Guthrie "is one of the boys now" since her 15th-place finish in the World 600 last Sunday and she can expect some hard competition among stock car drivers.

"She's one of the boys now," Petty said two days after his second-place showing in the same Charlotte, N.C., event.

"She's not a rookie as far as being in competition anymore"

Petty, who has been plagued this year by car problems and an ulcer, followed David Pearson to the finish line at Charlotte to take home $22,465 in second place earnings.

Although his only win in 13 starts this season came in the Carolina 500 at Rockingham, N.C., he has finished second four times and fourth twice. Petty is looking for his second win June 13 at the $124,000 Riverside 400 in California.

"I've won four races out there in the past," he said. "Our chances are pretty good right now. We usually run real good there. We'll try out the track next week."

He has won two 500s and two 400s at Riverside, a track he says he enjoys racing because of the different driving skills it requires.

"This is a more challenging track. But I don't think I'd like to drive this type of track all the time."

How would the North Carolina racing star feel about meeting Guthrie at Riverside?

"Fine, as long as she doesn't get in my way," he grinned.

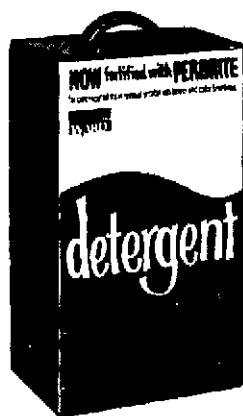

"In fact, she'd probably do better at Riverside because that's the type of track she's used to."

Brown Wouldn't Let City Sink

NEW YORK (UPI) — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., saying he "would not stand by and let a city sink," has proposed a three-point program to pump new life into fiscally crippled New York.

"We should change the formula for revenue-sharing in a way that recognizes the city's needs," Brown said Tuesday. "Second, we should establish a national health program to relieve the terrible Medicare-Medicaid burden. And we should enact the Humphrey-Hawkins bill (urging a federal full-employment policy)."

"I would not stand by and let a city sink," he said. "If we can't rebuild our cities, I don't think America will make it over the next 10 years."

The Democratic presidential contender, in New York to woo delegates to the party's national convention, reacted sharply to the suggestion that he is "fuzzy" on campaign issues. In rapid-fire response to a series of questions, he summed up his stand on topics ranging from abortion to unemployment.

"I ask a lot of questions about issues, and some people get irritated by that," Brown told a news conference. "But, I think we have to question the conventional wisdom of the day and see if there isn't another answer."

Brown's "other answers" included:

Abortion: "I think each person has to make that decision for himself."

Busing to achieve racial integration: "It's in the hands of the Supreme Court and those nine gentlemen will have to form our nation's policy. But I think there must be strong moral leadership on the part of the executive. I have strong reservations about the use of busing to a city like Los Angeles."

African Development: "America must lead the fight for majority rule in those countries. The one person-one vote system works well here. I think they should try it."

Foreign Policy: "I don't think it can be divorced from domestic policy. There's a popular notion in the country that only a small group of persons possess the arcane knowledge that comprises our foreign policy. I'd take the professors that shape our policy and send them back to Harvard and Texas and let them write their books."

Middle East: "The Arabs have got to recognize that Israel has the right to exist and they must sit down and negotiate a peace settlement. Until they do, I think we must provide Israel with sufficient military and economic aid."

Detente: "We must realize that the Soviet Union is an expansionary power. We must take a tougher stance. This country is more in touch with where this planet is going."

Unemployment: "I support the Humphrey-Hawkins bill which would commit this country to a full employment economic policy."

Pollution: "I think the automobile companies can make a clean engine. Volvo Company has developed an engine that meets the tough pollution standards in California. But who do you see lobbying in Congress?" Ford and GM, saying it can't be done."

Late Tuesday night, as primary returns were coming in, Brown told reporters that the victory of the uncommitted slate he backed in Rhode Island is a significant token of strength.

"I'm very happy that the people of Rhode Island have given me a strong vote of confidence..." Brown said. "When I combine that with the win in Maryland over Carter (and) the 2-1 victory in Nevada over both Carter and Church, I think it demonstrates that Jimmy Carter has yet to prove himself as the front-runner."

LWV: Door Open For Men

KINGSTON — NOW IS THE TIME FOR ALL GOOD MEN... to join the League of Women Voters. Although delegates attending the league's national convention in New York City recently decided against a name change which would make it obvious that the league is made up of both sexes, the welcome mat has been out for "men voters" since 1974.

Today there are 3,100 men in the League of Women Voters make that 3,102, for both Gov. Hugh Carey and New York City Mayor Abe Beame joined during the N.Y.C. Convention, the Governor commenting that he paid his dues for the New York City League because "I don't want anyone to think I'm doing anything nationally—except attending the second most important convention here in July." Mayor Beame jokingly complained about the $15 membership fee he had to pay with fiscal conditions as they are in New York.

There are three chapters of the LWV in Ulster County: New Paltz, Mid-Ulster County (comprising Kingston-Woodstock area), and Saugerties. All of them have some men voters, but all would like to have more male members who share their belief that good citizenship is enlightened citizenship.

The League of Women Voters is a non-partisan political education organization which seeks to help all voters make their choices of candidates and issues intelligently and knowledgeably.

Now is the time for all good men—and women—to join the LWV.

Hinchey Bill on Interest

ALBANY — "When a lending institution hands the consumer a check for a loan," said Assemblyman Maurice D. Hinchey, D-Ulster, "the interest has already been deducted, as well as a premium if the borrower buys credit insurance to extend for the term of his loan."

"Then, if the borrower dies or defaults, the lending institution keeps all of the pre-paid interest. I want it returned to the borrower or his survivors."

Hinchey's bill, A10610, which passed the Assembly last week, would require this of commercial banks which make home improvement loans, out-of-state banks which have offices in New York State, credit unions, institutions which make motor vehicle loans and others who make retail installment contracts.

A further provision of Hinchey's bill would require refunding of unearned interest when a loan is refinanced.

Last year, Hinchey, a member of the Assembly Banking Committee, sponsored a bill which became law, requiring that this kind of interest on personal loans, home improvement loans and on mobile home loans from savings banks and savings and loan associations be paid back. The bill this year extends the provision to additional institutions.

Gilman Endorsed

MIDDLETOWN — The Republican committees of the City of Newburgh, Towns of Mount Hope and Crawford in Orange County and the Town of Stony Point in Rockland County have unanimously endorsed the candidacy of Rep. Benjamin A. Gilman, 26th Dist., for a third term in the U.S. Congress.

The Hudson Valley Congressman expressed his "deep appreciation for the endorsement and expression of support for my work in Washington."

Congressman Gilman has previously been endorsed by the GOP Committees of Wallkill, Deerpark, Middletown, Montgomery, Hamptonburg, Clarkstown and the Southern Ulster Republican Committees of Marlboro, Plattekill and Shawangunk.

Gilman is a member of the House International Relations, Post Office and Civil Service Committees, the House Select Committee on Missing Persons in Southeast Asia, the Board of Visitors of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and is a Congressional Adviser to the UN Law of the Sea Conference.

Bombing The Rock

A bomb exploded late Tuesday in an apparent attempt to blow up Plymouth Rock in Plymouth, Mass., police said today. The historic rock was undamaged. (UPI)

Police Solve Brink's Case

MONTREAL (UPI) — Police said they have cracked the biggest armed robbery in North American history and today are on the track of the $2.8 million cash taken in the daring hijack of a Brink's armored truck last March.

In a series of 30 raids Tuesday, police arrested three women and three men and recovered $100,000 of the Brink's loot. The Criminal Investigation Bureau said further arrests are expected shortly.

"This was the break we were looking for. The case is broken, but by no means completed," said Inspector Jean-Claude Rondou of the CIB.

Rondou added, however, that as a result of Tuesday's raids and other classified information "we are now looking for specific persons." Police sources said four to six other persons are being sought.

Rondou said, while a number of firearms were seized in the raids, the six persons arrested offered no resistance. The veteran policeman said there is no doubt the $100,000 was part of the Brink's haul.

"I saw the way it was stacked and I am sure it was from the Brink's job," he said. "The money was seized in a number of places. Some of it was loose and some of it was stacked and wrapped in elastic bands."

He would not say whether police feel they can recover all $2.7 million still missing.

County Supers Vote Against Concorde

FAIRFAX, Va. (UPI) — The Board of Supervisors of a Northern Virginia county over which the supersonic Concorde flies voted early today to take the government to court to stop the flights.

The Fairfax County board, armed with data showing the French and British transports flying into Dulles Airport violate county noise standards, agreed first to request the Federal Aviation Administration to suspend the Concorde flights, which began May 24.

"The FAA is expected to refuse to do so, claiming that the county's ordinance is without effect," said county spokesman Edmund L. Castillo.

If that happens, he added, "probably early next week, the county will file suit against the agency in a federal court."

At a lengthy board meeting, county attorney F. Lee Ruck recommended the action to the board shortly after midnight, citing a section of the Federal Noise Act of 1972. Ruck said the law requires federal agencies to enforce state and local noise regulations on installations which they operate.

He told the supervisors he had an oral statement from the county's noise consultant — Noise and Vibration Control Corp. of Norfolk, Va. — that daily noise readings indicate both the British and French aircraft are violating the county's noise ordinance.

The supersonic planes were given a 16-month trial period for flying into Dulles Airport by Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman, who has said the Fairfax County noise ordinances are unconstitutional.

See more of America when there's so much more to see.

If you haven't seen your own country lately this is the year to do it. What a year. There's something inspirational patriotic symbolic or just plain fun going on almost everywhere in the U.S.

Once-in-a-lifetime Bicentennial events. Historical re-enactments. Important sporting events.

Whole towns turning out to make free pan cakes or rhubarb pies or a one-ton banana pudding. People racing in wash tubs or milk carton boats.

Classical music or jazz festivals. Log-rolling and old time fiddlers' contests. Horse shows. Rodeos. Antique shows.

Rhododendron shows.

Honor is paid to the peanut, to mules, hot air balloons, the English, French, Germans, Scots, Irish, Czechs and all the others who came here in the name of freedom.

Tribute is paid to Hiawatha, Helen Keller, King Kalakaua, the Wright Brothers, PT Barnum and Paul Bunyan.

Only in America can so much originality, talent, variety and sheer joy of living come together. Your travel agent can give you news of these events.

If you fail to take your kids on The Great American Vacation of '76 this summer, they will never forgive you.

Independent Wealth.

It didn't come EASY.

Basically, we were born broke. So Americans got together and loaned their new government over $27,000,000 on faith alone.

Eventually, it was that faith that won the war and our freedom. Today, that faith is still alive.

Over 9 1/2 million modern Americans buy United States Savings Bonds regularly through the Payroll Savings Plan... and others where they bank.

And while their savings grow, they're helping their country grow, too. Independently.

Now U.S. Bonds pay 6 1/2% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4 1/2% the first year). Lost, stolen or destroyed Bonds can be replaced if records are provided. U.S. Bonds are not cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes and federal tax may be deducted until redemption.

ROLLING STONE

BY PATRICK SNYDER
LAS VEGAS (KFS) - The weight of stardom rests on Natalie Cole's shoulders as lightly as the gossamer fabrics she wears onstage. Indeed, she was born to stardom - as Nat King Cole's daughter, she grew up amid its trappings. A year ago, rave reviews greeted her debut album, "Inseparable." Then the title track and "This Will Be" became hit singles, and she won two coveted Grammys - for best new artist of the year, and for best r&b performance by a female (on "This Will Be"). Her new album, "Natalie," is largely in the same vein as "Inseparable," but, according to producer Chuck Jackson, "different in the way it speaks to me... it's deeper with more leverage."

The core of Natalie's audience is black, but her appeal cuts across much of popular music. Her producer/composer team of Chuck Jackson and Marvin Yancy have turned out a spirited album that moves from understated ballads to hand-clapping, sophisticated funk. Natalie's voice purrs and wails and challenges head-on the preeminence of Aretha Franklin and Roberta Flack. COSBY'S ADVICE

Yet, at the Las Vegas Hilton, where she opened for Bill Cosby, Natalie, accustomed to the liveliness of black audiences familiar with her material, found the vacationing middle-aged crowd on hand to be disconcertingly difficult. Moreover, she usually works with a five-piece band and two backup singers this time around, Las Vegas smothered her with a wet mattress of marshmallow strings. Then a few days into her three-week engagement, she remembered some advice: "Bill Cosby said, 'You have to remember that a lot of these folks have gone to their travel agent and said, "Send us to Las Vegas a real nice hotel, rated GP," and they're really scared. They come to the show and they don't know if it's alright to yell out or clap in the middle of a number.'"

The well-heeled people in the audience really weren't such strangers to Natalie. Her father's home was in a posh section of Los Angeles and her best friend was the daughter of the owner of the Vons supermarket chain. She attended private secondary schools and never touched on the significance of being black in America until she went to the University of Massachusetts.

"I didn't see ALL black anything until I went to college," she says over brunch in her suite at the Hilton. "I really felt that black people were not only a minority, but that it was extraordinary to find more than one or two black people in the same area. I remember going to Mexico with my dad and seeing poor people. I was horrified. Then, at 18, I went to college and it made me realize how much I was missing, that I'd been living in a bubble." It didn't take long for Natalie to translate her broadening consciousness into action with campus political activities aimed at reforming the academic structure. An audible pride enters her voice when she speaks of what they'd accomplished. "There were 700 to 1,000 blacks enrolled by the end of my sophomore year," she recalls.

In her junior year she began singing in bands, doing mostly white rock & roll. She found, after college, that as Nat King Cole's daughter bookings weren't difficult to obtain on the lounge circuit. Then, in 1973, she was introduced to a Montreal promoter, Kevin Hunter, who became her manager.

"We decided not to sell ourselves out," Natalie says, "and do ballads, daddy's songs, and stuff that wasn't me." But music executives still saw her in an MOR (middle of the road) mold. Hunter, now with a grin, recalls that period. "I'd say, 'She can be one of the greatest r&b singers of today,' and they'd say, 'Aw, anybody can do that.'"

"VICTORY FOR STYLE" Meeting Jackson and Yancy in 1974 was Natalie's turning point. They provided her with material and a production direction that eventually won over Capitol records. But it didn't happen instantly. "I turned to rhythm and blues about two months after I went into the studio," she recalls, "and found my style by accident. I knew I didn't want to sing rock, but at first I didn't know if my voice could handle rhythm and blues. Thank God it turned out that it could and

Viet Offensive: Political Move

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — North Vietnam never had the intention of negotiating an end to the war, according to the Hanoi general credited with planning and leading last year's winning offensive.

"Obviously, the main blow to end revolutionary warfare should always be a military one," Gen. Van Tien Dung wrote in the latest installment of his book-length article on how he won the Vietnam war.

The four-star general and member of the 11-man North Vietnamese politburo said the decision to launch last year's offensive was a political one.

But after the decision was made, he wrote, the task of "liberating" South Vietnam became purely military.

The latest installments of Dung's memoirs of the offensive make it more clear than ever how much control was exercised by North Vietnam over the battle in the south.

In addition to Dung himself, at least three other members of the North Vietnamese politburo were in South Vietnam to direct both the fighting and the consolidation of Communist power in captured areas.

Among them were Le Duc Tho, No. 6 politburo member and former chief Paris negotiator; Tran Quoc Hoan, No. 10 man in the politburo who was in charge of consolidating power, and Pham Hung, the No. 4 politburo member in overall charge of operations in the south for the Communist Party.

As with the case of earlier installments of his history of the offensive, Dung's latest writings are entertaining as well as informative, a change from the usual dry treatises by North Vietnamese leaders.

Among points made by Dung in his often opinionated article:

—North Vietnamese forces scooped up for use all usable, captured war material from the Saigon military forces, including cargo planes, tanks and heavy artillery.

—Saigon prisoners often were pressed into service behind the front lines. Dung tells the story of a North Vietnamese division commander who spotted two soldiers repairing a truck. Noting their unilitary appearance, the general called: "Hey, you two, which unit do you come from? Since when do victorious troops dress so slovenly and disgracefully?" To which one of the men replied, "We're POWs, sir."

—Coded road signs directed North Vietnamese troops toward Saigon in the final weeks of the war. "No outsiders could know the true purpose of these direction signs, or guess who would be looking for these signs at the crossroads," Dung writes.

—There was no coordination between Viet Cong guerrilla forces around Saigon and the advancing North Vietnamese troops until the last days of the war. Dung credits the guerrillas with bravery, but indicates they were of little use in the final battles.

—Tough South Vietnamese resistance at Xuan Loc, 38 miles northeast of Saigon, from April 12-20 was unexpected and slowed the Communist advance. Dung says he switched battle tactics during the fight for the town from direct assault to encirclement, permitting other divisions to bypass Xuan Loc.

When the battle for Saigon was set, in late April, Dung said he had 15 divisions on the front line compared with only five from the Saigon army.

Displaying a humanitarian side, as well as military experience, Dung said he wanted to avoid a long battle for the capital in order to spare the lives of civilians.

He worked out a plan, he said, whereby his forces would overrun the Saigon army outside the capital, preventing defenders from retreating into the city and staging a last-ditch battle.

Meanwhile, he said, strike forces were formed to attack the five major targets in Saigon and to rescue the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese military team stationed inside Tan Son Nhut airport.

He said the five most important targets were Tan Son Nhut, the presidential palace, the joint general staff, police headquarters and the Saigon defense command.

Dung has good and bad words about foreign correspondents.

Newsmen wrote well of the heroic stand by the Saigon army at Xuan Loc. In Dung's words, Saigon Brig Gen Le Minh Dao, commander at Xuan Loc, "suddenly became a strongman, a savior of the Thieu regime, thanks to articles written by journalists who placed dollars above honor by signing their names in disreputable newspapers."

But of the same newsmen, when they wrote that Saigon was losing the war, Dung said: "A number of foreign correspondents in South Vietnam... guessed with more accuracy than the puppet general staff in Saigon about the numerical strength of our forces and the directions from which we would attack Saigon."

For the official Americans, Dung had contempt. "The U.S. masters (of the Saigon government) quickly brought into full play their strong point—fleeing," he wrote.

And he had words to ponder for Vietnamese who fled the country last year and who now are thinking about returning: "We deeply hated those who deliberately followed the Americans, forgot all the moral principles of the Vietnamese people and completely forgot their fatherland," the general said.

Cystic Fibrosis Hasn't Defeated Dogged Brenda Mayo

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — When not in the hospital, Brenda Joy Mayo works day and night at the University of Texas Medical Branch toward a doctorate in human genetics. Her goal is to find the cause of the disease that is killing her.

Brenda, 25, has cystic fibrosis — a debilitating, and incurable, respiratory disease that robs its victims of the ability to perform acts of living that are taken for granted by most persons her age.

It hasn't defeated her. "I'm really not afraid of my fate anymore, nor of the hurt," she said.

"I just want to hold on as long as possible and contribute something substantial about my disease to science and, on a personal basis, give hope and help to others with cystic fibrosis."

"I know I don't have more than five to 10 years at most. I could die in the summertime just from a bad attack of pneumonia."

"I know time is short. I don't want to waste it."

Statistics show one in 20 Caucasians may be carriers of cystic fibrosis. Brenda found she had the disease when she was 14. Since January, she's been hospitalized six times with pneumonia.

She must sleep at a 45-degree angle in order to cough up the continually collecting mucous. She has never weighed more than 90 pounds. Brenda is an accomplished musician and a gourmet cook. Inside her, there burns a desire to be able to do all the normal things others do.

"I don't feel bitter, but I do feel cheated in many respects," she said. "I just don't have the energy to go along with the drive."

"On the days I feel good I say, 'Oh world, I would really like to be like everybody else'. But the doggone body just won't let me do it."

Brenda hopes to finish her doctorate in December. She has had four papers on her research published and recently was awarded the National Foundation March of Dimes Merit Award for 1976.

She plans to begin medical school in September, 1977. Brenda believes her research is close to finding the genes that carry cystic fibrosis. She wants time to finish that work.

"Death is not the greatest loss in life. The greatest loss in life is dying with what's inside me," she said.

"My thoughts about a time such as that are those of Robert Frost's, 'The woods are lovely, dark and deep. But I have promises to keep — and miles to go before I sleep' — and miles to go before I sleep."

SUPREME COURT RULING BARES OUR SECRET PROMISE:

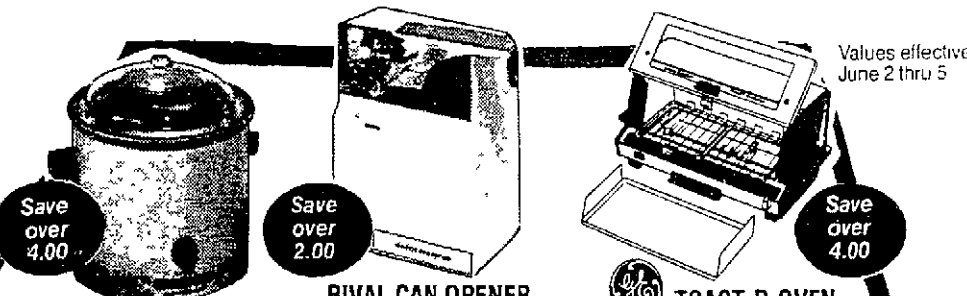

We promise to save you money on prescriptions.

For 46 years Mack Drug Stores has held to a policy of providing our customers the lowest possible prices on prescriptions. It's good business: satisfied customers paying low prices generate volume sales, hence business success. We promised big savings to our customers ... BUT WE COULDN'T BREATHE A WORD ABOUT IT!

Archaic state regulations kept drug stores from advertising prescription prices, or from even implying the existence of a low price program. Keeping the lid on prices seriously curtails comparison shopping, effecting higher prices industry-wide than in an openly competitive market.

Now dawns a new day. For you, for us. On May 24th, the U.S. Supreme Court declared unconstitutional the state restraints against prescription price advertising. Mack Drug Stores is now able to spread the word about our low prices. You can compare and shop in an openly competitive market ... and SAVE!

Mack's is proud of its low prescription prices. We have been for 46 years. Now the secret's out. See for yourself ... stop at your nearby Mack Drug Store today, or give us a call. You'll be surprised just how low prices are at Mack's.

Plenty More 'Dixie'

ALEXANDRIA, La. (UPI) — Walter Hetherwick became something of a folk hero in this central Louisiana community for playing a recording of "Dixie" twice a day from his downtown office building. He also was charged with disturbing the peace.

Hetherwick was then given the go-ahead to play "Dixie" as often — and as loudly — as he likes.

"There's nothing offensive about 'Dixie,'" the Pineville, La., businessman said after his acquittal on disturbing the peace charges for playing the song too loudly from atop his downtown building.

"I think it's a beautiful song and I think 99 per cent of the people will agree."

"This thing has kinda grown out of all proportion."

Bumperstickers and T-shirts saying "I stand with Walter Hetherwick and Dixie" are seen around town.

"Everybody says keep-up the good work and keep playing the music," Hetherwick said. "Every afternoon and every day at noon, it'll be playing."

Mayor John Snyder swore out a complaint for Hetherwick's arrest May 4. The mayor said blacks and downtown businessmen complained about the music.

Plan Truck Trek Across Mexico

By Robin Adams Sloan
Q: Is Italian film director Federico Fellini, whose films show so much sexual promiscuity, much of a playboy restaurants in England these days so hold off on a wedding present. We'll get back to you on this one.  Robin Adams Sloan welcomes questions from readers.

Gossip Beat

himself? - J.F., Wheeling, W.Va.

A. Fellini is usually pictured as a detached observer of the sexual scene - contentedly married to elfin actress Giulietta Masina. For the last year, however, maybe under the influence of his latest film, "Casanova," Federico has been seen around a lot with a beautiful young actress, Olympia Carisi. Have we been wrong about him all along?

THE COST OF HIGH LIVING: Harold Robbins, as far as we know the world's richest writer, is reported to have received $1.4 million for the rights to his next book, "Dreams Don't Die," before he wrote a word of it. Asked how he settled on that figure, Robbins said, "Well, I got $800,000 for my last book, 'The Pirate,' and the cost of living has gone up a lot since then."

Q. Actor Richard Harris and his new wife, Ann Turkel, were trying to have a daughter to go with Harris' three teenage sons. Any news? - P.J., Livermore, Calif.

A. We're sorry to report that Ann, who had taken special treatments which were supposed to increase the chances of her having a daughter, recently suffered a miscarriage in Rome. But the couple say they will try again.

Q. You mentioned some time back that Stefanie Powers took time off from her own acting career to help keep her lover, William Holden, off the sauce. Are they still together? - W.O., Linden, N.J.

A. Absolutely. The two are planning to drive a truck across Mexico - and after that, they're off to Tibet.

Q. I've heard that other countries are undergoing even stranger nostalgia crazes than we are in America. Does violence figure in? - G.V., Wilmington, Del.

A. It looms very large, with World War II the main focus. Germans are re-examining the Hitler years; the Japanese are looking again at the mystique of the kamikaze pilots; and one of the top TV shows in England has a war setting. Of course, the British remember the war differently than we do. Although American GI's are featured in the TV series, its title is "Yanks Go Home."

Q. Our presidential contenders don't seem to be happy unless they can attract a roomful of Hollywood stars to sing their praises. Who was lucky enough to bag super-star Robert Redford? S.Z., Buffalo, N.Y.

A. Redford, it turns out, is a special kind of bird. In spite of his involvement in such political movies as "The Candidate" and "All the President's Men" and his activism in conservation causes he has kept aloof from individual endorsements. Five Democratic hopefuls came pleading for support but Redford turned them all down.

Q. What's your bet? Do you think Warren Beatty will marry singer-turned-actress Michelle Phillips? - C.M., Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

A. Highly unlikely. Beatty will marry eventually, probably when he decides it's time to start a family. Our guess is he'll pick a beautiful, very young heiress or perhaps someone with a touch of royalty. Why not? He'll have his choice.

Q. Is Twiggy trying to set some kind of record for the world's longest engagement? - W.L., Chicago

A. Twiggy, who has plumped up some lately, says she is going to marry her live-in lover, Michael Witney, on her birthday in September. However, she and the American actor have been having huge, screaming fights in some of the best

Articles of Confederation
The "Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union," adopted by the Continental Congress in 1777, did not establish a sovereign nation. The colonies, or states, delegated only those powers they could not handle individually, such as to wage war, establish a uniform currency, contract debts for general expense and make treaties with foreign nations. Taxes for payment of expenses were levied by the states. The confederacy was called "the United States of America," but considered in the plural, a cooperating group rather than a national entity.

ROBBINS: It's the cost of living.

FELLINI: Taking a new direction?

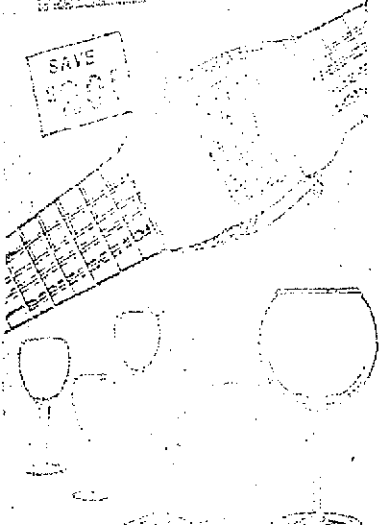

ANN: Another try for a daughter.

Declaration of Independence: Close Calls and Neglect

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The hallowed Declaration of Independence, along with the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, are displayed under a special glass shield in a shrine at the National Archives. Every night, an armed, uniformed guard presses a button and the documents are lowered 20 feet into a steel and concrete vault.

It was not always thus. According to Archives historians, the Declaration of Independence once was transported here and there in linen bags and metal boxes, by wagon, boat, Pullman sleeper and armored vehicle.

After the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, the Declaration was stored in Ft. Knox, Ky., where it was examined and found to have been mended with glue and cellulose tape "discolored to a molasses color."

And incidentally, the Declaration was not signed July 4, 1776, as is commonly believed, but nearly a month later.

These little-known facts are contained in "Declaration of Independence: The Adventures of a Document," a booklet which the National Archives has published for the Bicentennial.

Although the Declaration was adopted July 4, 1776, by the Continental Congress, it was not signed until Aug. 2, after it had been "engrossed" or written out. John Hancock, president of the Congress, was first to sign the sheet of fine parchment. The names of the other signers were kept secret for fear of reprisals from the British.

During its 200 years, the cherished document suffered much physical abuse and several "close calls," the Archives said.

It was creased and broken from repeated rolling up. It was exposed to direct sunlight for 35 years when it hung ignominiously in the U.S. Patent Office, from 1841 to 1876.

A few months after it was moved, the Patent Office was gutted by fire.

The ink with which the original text was written did not penetrate the parchment, and part of the script flaked off. The signers used homemade powder-and-water inks. Within 50 years their signatures had "faded significantly."

During the Declaration's early years it probably traveled with the Congress to at least eight cities. When it finally found a permanent home in Washington, it was shifted from building to building, some of which "offered no security against fire."

The Declaration's surface ink was partially "detached" when Secretary of State John Quincy Adams in 1820 commissioned an exact copy to be made by copperplate engraving.

The Declaration was in such disrepair by 1856 that a magazine writer called it "that old looking paper with the fading ink."

The Archives said nothing was done to protect the Declaration until 1903, when the National Academy of Sciences recommended that it "be kept in the dark and dry as possible and never placed on exhibition." It was then locked and sealed.

The Declaration remained in the custody of the State Department until 1921, when Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes ordered it transferred to the Library of Congress.

It made the trip in the library's mail wagon, cushioned by a pile of leather mail sacks. At the library it was placed in a "sort of shrine" designed by Francis Bacon, brother of the architect of the Lincoln Memorial.

When World War II broke out, the document was sent under armed guard to the bullion depository at Ft. Knox. For that trip, it was carefully placed between two sheets of acid-free manila paper, wrapped in strong, all-rag pasteboard and padlocked in a bronze container sealed in lead. The package weighed 150 pounds.

At Ft. Knox, the Declaration was repaired with Japanese tissue fibers moistened with rice paste. When the threat of enemy attack had passed, it was moved back to the Library of Congress.

In Cold War America of December, 1952, the document was transferred by armored tank to the National Archives, then considered the most bomb-proof building in Washington, and it has been there ever since.

This year, in honor of the Bicentennial, the Archives has redecorated and relighted the display area and added an exhibition entitled "The Written Word Endures: Milestone Documents of American History."

On display are the Louisiana Purchase Treaty, the Monroe Doctrine, patents for the cotton gin and incandescent lamp, the Emancipation Proclamation, the Japanese surrender treaty of 1945, the Woman's Suffrage Amendment.

School Buses..How Safe?

By UPI
The crash of a school bus on a California freeway left 29 dead and 21 injured — and a haunting question of peril for millions of other children who commute daily to and from the classroom.

How safe really are they? A nationwide UPI survey of school transportation officials after the Yuba City, Calif., tragedy Friday indicates they are not as safe in many cases as their parents might wish, largely because driving a school bus is a low-paid, part-time job.

The survey disclosed a wide variance of standards from state to state in the hiring and training of bus drivers, but almost universally one problem remained at the top of the list of concerns.

Leonard Kane, director of school building and transportation for the state of Mississippi, put it best.

"Just getting drivers at the salaries that are paid in Mississippi is difficult sometimes," he said. "We have to have almost a constant recruiting program ..."

The minimum salary for the man or woman entrusted with the lives of commuting school children in Mississippi is $145 per month. It varies little from that level elsewhere.

In nearly every state, the job remains a "moonlighting" proposition at best.

Gabe Gilley, director of transportation for Texas schools, said, "Most of the school bus drivers in Texas are parttime employees, and that makes it difficult to get the type of people we want."

He said a new program of intensified training for school bus drivers recently has been devised, but that not all drivers in the state have been exposed to it — a situation he said officials are correcting "at rapid paces."

Official concern for the safety of commuting children recently was spurred in Memphis, Tenn., after an accident in February created a storm of protest from parents, and after one mother — Mrs. Nancy Ratliff — chased down one recklessly speeding bus and made a citizens' arrest of its driver.

The driver was fired and the firm contracted to handle busing for the Memphis school system since has intensified its training program.

But Charles Walters, manager of the Memphis busing operation, said distracting student rowdiness aboard his buses may be as great a hazard as lack of expertise on the part of the driver.

Walters said students last year vandalized the buses in which they rode to class, leaving $60,000 worth of broken windows and ruined upholstery in their wake.

"I'm not saying the discipline problem is causing accidents, but it is a factor," he said.

In Boston, where the yellow school bus is symbolic of the area's smoldering desegregation controversy, driving is almost combat duty. But Charles Mulhern, supervisor of school bus inspections, said the city's safety record still is a good one.

It remains, however, a part-time job, with pay ranging from $7 an hour in Boston to $3 an hour in suburban communities.

Your Horoscope

By Jean Dixon

THURSDAY, JUNE 3

Your birthday today. All though this year develops unevenly, your basic approach is enthusiastically lively. From time to time you must stop to rethink your directions and aims, make major adjustments. By year's end you're resting on your laurels. Today's natives focus on one set of ideas, go to any lengths to perfect it. Most like to travel, are on the move themselves or plan trips for others.

Aries (March 21-April 19) Be painstaking with matters involving money. Thrift has its limits. Excessive saving creates higher costs elsewhere. Keep romance well removed from business.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) It's unlikely progress can be made today on personal objectives. Be patient with endless rounds of palaver. Evening brings on dramatic moments.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Don't try to understand why people are the way they are. Accept or turn away from them on the basis of whether or not you're happy in dealing with them.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Only conservative approaches serve your current best interests. Vague agreements between you and those you expect to help you aren't likely to come true.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Estimates miss the mark. Wait for better information before making firm offers.

Your attitude determines the day's outlook: optimistic or gloomy.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually reliable people are somewhat erratic. Depend on your own observations. If existing plans don't fit changing conditions, make a few changes.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Jumping to conclusions leads to odd results, some amusing. Insight suggests the main thread of continuity to follow. Flattery misguides you.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You're in the mood to take drastic action. Realize that something can be said for all perspectives. Speculation is out if you're to keep going well.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Present strategy, completely different from the customary type, confuses you. For the time being skip bargains, pledges and guarantees.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If a subject is confidential, make no reference to it. Search for lost items may produce something else instead. Don't overdo creature comforts.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Check on how your budgets and schedules can accommodate someone's idiosyncrasy. People involve themselves in your situation in ways you haven't suspected.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) Individuals with authority adopt impractical courses. You can only adjust your own procedures, let them go their way. Extra health care is worthwhile.

Jean Adams TEEN FORUM

PAYOFF (Q) My friend threw a party. A lot of outsiders came. They brought pot and booze and things got wild. I was talking to this guy I'd never met before. We had a lot of common.

I was overtaken by his personality and things began to happen. One thing led to another. My friend's parents came in and found us getting it on. They called my parents and now they're trying to get him for statutory rape.

I tried to explain to them that it wasn't just his fault. Now they don't trust me and he may end up in prison. He's 19 and I'm 17. Please help me—Regret in Rhode Island.

(A) I hear your story over and over. I call it the story of the unchaperoned party. A party like that can get out of hand before you can say "Watch out." The boy is no more guilty than you are. You, he, your parents and the people at whose home the party got out of hand should handle this among yourselves. Urge your parents to be fair and do it this way. Pay whatever penalty they assess. Then tell them they can trust you, and mean it. Stay away from unchaperoned parties.

FORBIDDEN (Q) I turned 19 in December and I'm still not allowed to look at a boy. I've gone out with lots of kids. It's not mother knew about it I'd get killed. One time a boy called me up and I got grounded for two weeks just for talking on the phone. I can't talk to her about anything. Can you help me?—Prisoner in Pennsylvania.

(A) Ask your father to talk to your mother about the needs of a 13-year-old girl. A 13-year-old girl does not need to have regular dates yet. But she is ready to be friendly with boys and she is almost certainly going to do so even if she has to slip around to do it. That method is not healthy.

It is healthy for her to talk to them openly, in person and on the telephone, and to have them visit her at home, when her parents are there.

Your father should discuss these facts with your mother. I hope it will help.

Schermerhorn: Reconsider Fine

ALBANY — State Sen. Richard E. Schermerhorn, R-40th Dist., has asked the state's new environmental conservation commissioner Peter A. Berle to reassess his position in levying a more than $7 million fine on General Motors Corp. for discharging pollutants into the Hudson River.

Schermerhorn said that "If we are going to keep industry in this state, we are not going to do it by fining them $7 million."

He said he thinks Berle and Commerce Commissioner John Dyson should work closely in an effort "to not only keep the existing industry in New York, but to also attract new industry. We must effect a balance between environmental control and the economy."

In urging Berle to reconsider his fine against G.E., Schermerhorn noted that the firm could relocate in another state for considerably less than the amount of the fine if it chose to do so.

Carey Proposals Would Trim $100 Million From Tuition Aid

ALBANY — The cost of the State Education Assistance Program (SEAP) increased an estimated $10 million a year in 1975-76, according to a report released Monday by Gov. Hugh Carey.

The need for the changes was first pointed out by the Higher Education Services Corp. (HESC) several weeks ago when it reported that the spiraling cost of the program would far exceed the amount budgeted.

The governor's proposals were worked out after a series of conferences with members of legislative committee staffs and were intended to keep the program within the $138 million budgeted for SEAP for the 1976-77 fiscal year.

Most of the savings would result from stricter limits on students who currently qualify for higher awards by claiming they are no longer dependent on their parents. In essence, SEAP is a form of state aid to offset college tuition costs.

The number of undergraduate students claiming emancipated status and claiming higher awards grew from 525 in 1971-72 to 10,817 last year, according to a memo from the governor's office. One-quarter of the total receiving TAP grants excluded parental income in order to qualify for higher awards.

The changes outlined in a bill submitted to the legislature would:

— Restrict undergraduate eligibility for exclusion of parental income to students 22 or older, not living in college-owned or operated housing.

— Enable the HESC to exchange computer tapes with the State Tax Commission for use in verifying TAP applicants' income statements.

— Require all undergraduate TAP recipients to file applications to the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant federal education aid program to maximize use of federal funds.

— Reimstate a limit on awards for students who graduated from high school before Jan. 1, 1974 to the so-called Schedule B awards — a maximum of $600 versus $1,500 under "Schedule C" — except for veterans and students enrolled in state-funded educational opportunity programs at independent colleges.

First In Country At UCCC

Water Curriculum Published

STONE RIDGE — The curriculum developed at Ulster County Community College for the country's first Associate Degree program in Water Quality Monitoring has been published.

This curriculum, developed by Professor Richard B. Glazer at UCCC, now is being distributed nationwide by the community college and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, which funded it.

The program will be used by schools to train technicians required to monitor the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System Program (NPDES), established in 1972 by PL 92-500.

While the courses themselves were developed for pollution control studies, Professor Glazer said the method used is a prototype from which other programs in all fields — both technical and liberal arts — can be developed.

One of the reasons for publishing the curriculum for nationwide use, he reports, is that it will save educational institutions considerable money in setting up two-year water quality monitoring programs.

Everything in the published program is spelled out. Included are ways to organize the program, the people necessary for advisory councils, the faculty and administrative staff, and the physical facilities and equipment required.

Also detailed are methods of recruitment and placement and credentials entering students must possess.

"By clearly defining the objectives to be learned, the conditions under which they will be learned, and the performance levels which are considered acceptable, we can also identify the amount of time that the instructor must take in presenting the material, the exact facilities that will be utilized, and the equipment, both capital and expendable, that will be necessary to meet these objectives," says Professor Glazer.

This provides the potential for performing cost accounting to obtain the overall costs of the program, the costs for each course, costs for each objective, and per student cost.

"That means that now we have the ability to evaluate, modify, and justify a program to colleagues, administrators, elected officials who control the purse strings, and the people in the community who need and gain the direct benefits of the system," the professor observed.

It is estimated that more than 22,000 NPDES permits will be issued by the states and the EPA in the next two years. New York State alone expects some 1,200 of these permits to be issued by 1980.

Last September, Ulster County Community College began using this new curriculum to train the first group of students enrolled in the new two-year degree program.

Project Director Glazer, a Professor of Biology at UCCC, said graduates from this kind of a program will be able to do the tests stipulated by EPA to assure that all municipalities, industries and commercial businesses are complying with water quality regulations. "These technicians really are the first line of defense against the pollution of American water," he added.

The UCCC curriculum stresses on-the-job training, simulated experiences and self-instruction, based on clear learning objectives.

Professor Glazer says the "guess factor" has been eliminated from all the courses. "Our curriculum is different from the traditional methods of teaching, because it gives the student a precise definition of what he must be able to do to complete the program and what he is equipped to do when he finishes it. The student knows even before coming to class what will be expected of him or her in each lesson for the first two years."

Because of the way the curriculum is designed, courses or parts of courses can be taken out and put together in various ways for workshops, short training institutes or seminars.

Cancer Teaching Day

STONE RIDGE — A Cancer Teaching Day for Nurses, sponsored by the Ulster County Unit of the American Cancer Society, will be held at Ulster County Community College, Vanderlyn Hall, on Wednesday, June 16. The program is entitled, "Another Dimension of Care: Death and Dying."

The faculty includes: Janet Barkley, RN, Director of Nursing, Division of Oncology, Albany Medical College; Diana Parker, Social Work Director, Division of Oncology at Albany Medical College; and Vanderlyn Pine, PhD, Assoc. Professor of Sociology at the State University at New Paltz. The Planning Committee is being chaired by Jean Brodhead, RN, Director of In-service at Kingston Hospital.

Other members of the committee are: Roxanne Bell, RN, Nursing Dept. Instructor at Ulster County Community College; Mary Keating, RN, Inservice Coordinator at Benedictine Hospital; Gladys Moon, RN, Patient Care Coordinator at Kingston Hospital; Regina Scrocco, RN, Ulster County Health Department; and Anne Rick, RN.

Program and registration forms are available. The program is open to other allied health professionals.

Hansut Elected

HIGHLAND — Robert A. Hansut, the current president of the Highland Central School District Board of Education, has been elected president of the Ulster County School Boards Association for the 1976-77 school year.

Hansut, a resident of Highland for the past twenty years, is employed by Central Hudson Gas and Electric Company as an assistant contract supervisor.

The Ulster County School Boards Association, over which Hansut will preside, is an organization of all of the boards of education in Ulster County, providing a forum of interaction among and between those school districts as well as functioning as an exponent for education in Albany.
